Welcoming Summer

First Week Of April We Double All The Prices And Hide The Plumbers And Electricians

By Dan Rattiner

Well, here it is the beginning of April and we make the big change over to the summer a season.

April 3, for instance, was Remove the Last of the Snow Day and in all our downtown villages the snow plows came, went into the parking lots behind Main Street and took the very last of the giant mound of snow that they had piled up all winter, dumped it into trucks and hauled it off.

April 4 in the Hamptons was the official Change of Prices Day. From nine o'clock 'til noon, and I'm sure you noticed this, all the stores everywhere were closed while almost 900 high school kids, given the morning off, attacked all the merchandise in the stores with pricing guns, doubling everything. By noon, what had been a $200 leather jacket was marked at $399 and strappy sandals, which were going at $18 before April 4, were now $36 dollars.

Each.

On April 4, all of the hiding places on the second floors on many of our stores and restaurants were opened up and made into dormitories so that all of the local workmen, the plumbers handymen, electricians, landscapers and lawnmowers could as they say in the Mafia, go to the mattresses and hide out until October. It would be just impossible to find anybody to do any work around a house. The workmen would be up in these dormitories watching television, drinking beer and playing poker.

April 4 in the Hamptons was the official Change of Prices Day. What had been a $200 leather jacket was marked at $399...

On the morning of April 5, just before the start of the weekend all the locals sitting out on the beaches all winter, all bundled up in their woolies, were removed and along with their lawn chairs, brought back to their respective homes. Now, beginning April 5, the beaches are cleared and available for the summer people until mid-October.

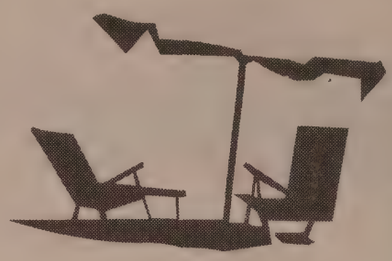
April 5, late in the day, was also when all the menus in all the restaurants were changed. The old winter menu at Max Fransen's Greasy Spoon Bar & Grill with its daily specials – its Wednesday meatloaf with mashed potatoes and brussel sprouts complete with fruit cup and ice-cream dinner for $7.95 – was over. The new menu was brought in, fresh sliced fruit from Australia, appetizer ground filet mignon tartar flambé with a vegetable medley and pomme frites and desert of assorted glace, for $39.99 when you added it all up, plus tax. And, of course, The Greasy Spoon Bar & Grille sign came down and the Café Du Max sign, hand chiseled in mahogany went up.

One of the more unusual April transitions came the following morning when the surf sounds and wave heights were modified. As many people are aware, the two huge black, plastic knobs that control wave height and surf noise are located inside a shed behind the main pavilion at Coopers Beach in Southampton. Highly trained local experts – you have to apprentice for two years – go inside the yacht building and raise the wave heights thirty percent, and adjust the surf noise timer to loud during the day, soft at night so that the oceanfront residents can get some sleep.



Finally, there was the ritual change over in front of the Sagg Main store from parallel parking to diagonal parking to accommodate more cars. With the new signs up and the change over job complete, locals built a huge bonfire on East Hampton Main Beach that evening to celebrate.

Next week the lifeguard stands, the brown uniforms for the summer police auxiliary and the woodsticks and chalk arrive along with the various stage sets for Guild Hall, Bay Street and the Westhampton Performing Arts Center, all up from Palm Beach where they've spent the winter.

Summer is here, run around outside and enjoy it, see you all in the fall for the change back. ●

Maximum loan amount up to 75% of the appraised value of your home less all outstanding mortgages. 20 Year Term: 5 year interest only period (draw period), followed by a 15 year amortization period. Principal amortization of 180 payments of principal plus interest at a variable rate. The initial rate until January 1, 2001 on lines closed by June 30, 2000 is fixed at 7.99%. Rate converts to Prime thereafter. Annual Percentage Rate (APR) may vary and adjust monthly based on changes in the Prime Rate as published in the Wall Street Journal. Maximum lifetime APR of 18%. APR includes interest only and no other costs. Example: Monthly interest payment based on 7.99% on each $10,000 of outstanding principal is approximately $66.58. Thereafter, approximate monthly interest payment on each $10,000 of outstanding principal based on the Prime Rate (non-discounted) on March 23, 2000 would be $75.00. Property insurance is required. The terms of this offer may be withdrawn or changed at any time.

Slow Down

A Private Citizen Can Legally Pull Speeders Over In East Hampton To Warm Them. Maybe

By Dan Rattiner

Ok, here's one scenario. You're driving along, maybe a little too fast, maybe 50 in a 35 mile an hour zone and some guy on the side of the road stops as he's raking the lawn and stares out at you with a stern expression. He holds out his right arm, palm down and makes an up and down motion. Slow down, it says.

Here's another scenario. You're driving down Main Street, 50 mph in a 35 mile zone and a big Jeep Cherokee pulls in behind you and the driver starts flashing his headlights. You pull over, thinking that maybe this is an unmarked cop car – and you're right. The cop gets out, he's in plain street clothes and he walks over to the drivers window and gives you a big talking to and then writes you a ticket.

OK, here's a third scenario. It's exactly the same as number two, except that after the man gives you a big talking to, he says "Good-bye," gets back in the Cherokee and drives away. He's never identified himself as a cop but he hasn't pretended to be a cop either. He's just out there trying to slow the traffic down.

Is either the man in scenario one or in scenario number three breaking a law?

The answer is No, he isn't. He is a good samaritan out to keep peace and good order in the neighborhood just the same as he would if he had gone next door to ask someone to turn their stereo down.

On the other hand, I'm not so sure about scenario number three.

The facts are these. For the past week, once or twice a day, people have called the East Hampton Town police to report that a man in an unmarked car has flashed his lights behind them, pulled them over and then given them a lecture about driving too fast. Yes, they would be able to identify him if they saw him, but No, amazingly they could not describe either the car or the license number. Also, yes, it has caused them to slow down, which is good.

The police, after some internal debate and checking with the chief, decided to keep on the lookout for this person. For days they were unsuccessful in locating him. But then, quite by chance, he located himself.

Thinking it was a police officer, he pulled over at which point a man got out, came to the drivers window and told him was doing 65 in a 35...

On Friday morning, about ten minutes past nine, two men shouting at each other came in the East Hampton Town police station, slamming the door behind them. One of them was Fred Hoffman of Southampton, the other Edward Curry of Montauk.

Two officers quickly came into the lobby of the police station to talk to these gentlemen, and in very short order they had it sorted out.

Mr. Hoffman said that a week earlier he had been driving on the Montauk Highway in Montauk by Edgemere Street when a blue Chevrolet Suburban pulled up behind him and began flashing its headlights. Thinking it was a police officer, he pulled over at which point a man got out, came to the driver's window and told him he was doing 65 in a 35 mph zone. Then the man walked back to his car and drove off.

Now, Mr. Hoffman said, he was on the Montauk Highway in Napeague on his way to Amagansett, when the same Chevrolet Suburban pulled up behind him and started tailgating him really closely, then pulled out and passed him, almost cutting him off and causing an accident.

The two men stopped their cars and the argument started. It continued as both decided to press charges against each other at the police station.

The truth is the police department was pretty baffled as to what they might charge either of these men with, other than being angry with one another. There had been no witnesses to either incident and in fact neither incident had involved a crime, but it was apparent to them that Ed Curry, forty-four, was their vigilante, pseudo-police officer.

Snarfling around outside with the blue Chevrolet Suburban, officers discovered that on the dashboard there was a police scanner. With it, Mr. Curry could keep track of all police and fire activity in the town of East Hampton. It is legal to have such a device in your home, but it is illegal to have one in operation in your car.

One officer began writing up a summons for this violation. Another officer wrote the license plate number to check on the registration

Mr. Curry has a vanity license plate number. It is "MONTAK." Between the "A" and the "K," someone (Mr. Curry?) had, using a magic marker, written the letter "U." There was another violation: altering a license plate.

Back inside the police station, the officers sent Mr. Hoffman on his way, but then detained Mr. Curry, telling him they were bringing him up on these charges. They told him they were going to put him in the police lockup until a judge could arrive, had him remove his belt and the contents of his pants and shirts pockets, inventoried them, put them in a manila envelope and put them in a locker, then put Mr. Curry in the lockup and turned the key.

There he stayed all morning until Justice Roger Walker was able to arraign him on the charges. He was released with $350 bail and is awaiting an upcoming hearing.

I told this true story to a friend of mine the day after I had heard about it and he told me that in driving to the office, which is where we were, he had passed a man who had held out three fingers to him as he went by to remind him, he said, there was a thirty mile an hour speed limit.

"I held out two fingers," he said, "to let him know I understood. Sort of a V for victory."

"He might have thought you were indicating twenty miles an hour," I said. "What else happened?"

"Then he held out one finger – sort of like saying if you could save one life..."

"Which finger?" I asked. •

TIME In Trouble

TIME Magazine Offers Me Millions, LIFE May Sue For Two Dollars And Thirty Cents

By Dan Rattiner

About a month ago, Time Warner, the giant media conglomerate, got swallowed up by America Online. At first, business experts thought it must be the other way around. Time Warner was the first or second largest media giant in the world, American Online was this Internet Company that was just ten years old; surely there was something backwards about all this.

But the market valuation of AOL, whatever that meant, was actually larger than that of Time Warner. If Time Warner was big, AOL was even bigger. It was AOL that was buying Time Warner and indeed when the two principals shook hands on the deal, it was Time Warner's Gerald Levin who was looking up at the figure of Steve Case, looking back down at him.

On the other hand, a series of letters that I have received from Time Warner in recent weeks, has led me to believe that it is not so much that AOL has become a giant even bigger than the giant Time Warner, but that Time Warner has shrunk down to be even smaller than AOL. I offer my letters up as evidence.

Exhibit A. Time magazine is bending over backwards, even spending a small fortune to get me to renew my little subscription to their magazine. I am talking about thirty six dollars here. Just to get me to me to renew, they've offered me over one million, six hundred thousand dollars and a bright yellow ultrasonic AM, FM headset. It's hard to believe but it's true.

First of all let me say that I subscribe to only five magazines. I've subscribed to all of them for years and never before has anyone had to induce me to do so, I've enjoyed them. The five magazines are; The New Yorker, Time Magazine, Harper's. National Geographic and Life.

I knew something was amiss when last December a giant yellow envelope arrived in my mailbox with a big black band on the back that read, "Open and respond immediately." Inside there was a blue and gold certificate that had as its headline; One Million. Sixty hundred and Sixty Six Thousand, Six Hundred and Seventy Five Dollars Grand Prize Announcement.

"Only you, Dan Rattiner have been issued number NL4J9CA31: Enter now to win $1,666,675.00!" There was a red box in one corner with the following information in it: "Grand Prize entry #NL4J9CA31 registered to Dan Rattiner" and then under that a letter.

"Dear Mr. Rattiner: We are absolutely sure of one thing: Dan Rattiner is to be awarded $1,666,675,00 provided that NL4J9CA31 matches the grand prize winning number pre-selected by our computer. That's why it is absolutely imperative that you return your entry at once. Please respond within ten days and you will also qualify to win a $100,000 early bird bonus. Warning: Unauthorized usage of this prize entry number by anyone other than you is strictly prohibited. We're waiting to receive your entry Dan Rattiner. $1,666,675.00 next to your name is ready to be awarded so it's urgent that you act at once because you must return the Rattiner entry or risk forfeiting the $1,666,675.00 dollars to someone else."

Alongside this letter there were two round stickers, one yellow and one red and nearby a place where you could affix them. The yellow sticker read grand prize $1,666,675., the red one, free gift. On the other side there was a giant blue arrow with the words, "Return your entry today" inside. There was a yellow patch with the words "Ultrasonic AM, FM headset is yours free" inside.

Of course there was also a place I could make an "X" to indicate my renewal for my subscription to this magazine

I was so excited by this I didn't know what to do, so I called my tax accountant. When he called me back and I told him what it all said. he said to send it down to him, he would look it over.

A few days later, another yellow envelope arrived in the mail, this one beige. There was a yellow crime scene kind of tape on the back that read, "Tamper Proof, Tamper Proof, Tamper Proof. If this seal is broken at the time of arrival, please notify local postal authorities" and there was a red stamp on it that had the words in it, "Attention Postmaster: Handle in conformance with postal law and regulations as outlined in sections GO11.5 of the United States domestic mail manual. Urgent Notice."

Inside I learned that in spite of the fact that I hadn't replied there were people just like me who were among the more than 50,000 winners of the various prizes. There was Marie Glass of Las Vegas, Nevada, J. Fuller of Boise, Idaho, Edna Williamson of St. Catherine's, Ontario, Linda P. Abrams of Statesville, North Carolina and Elizabeth Parkerst of Sacramento, California. "The appearance of your name in this letter of the all time biggest winners in Sweepstakes presented by Time is not a mistake!" the letter read.

"In fact, the name Dan Rattiner is shown above for a very special reason. We stand ready to award the $1,666,675. in full. That means that Dan Rattiner of Bridgehampton, New York could be one of the biggest grand prize-winner in the history of the sweepstakes presented by Time. The letter was signed by Kenneth Godshall, Consumer Marketing Director.

"Be sure to qualify for the extra $100,000 cash early bird prize at stake," he wrote. "But also, Time magazine wants to send you the ultrasonic AM, FM headset, free." Apparently they had a glut of them at the office; they weren't able to quite give them all away.

There was an aerial view of Monte Carlo, the capital of Monaco on the Mediterranean on the back of this letter, a picture taken at night, "Second Prize," the sign under it read. "A high rollers trip for two to spectacular Monte Carlo with $5,000 in gambling chips, includes round trip air fare, deluxe hotel and sightseeing tour." Then there was a picture of a car. "First Prize, Chrysler Concord, a classically styled luxury car loaded with features including dual air-bags, anti-lock brakes, dynamic side impact protection and much more."

And then the grand prize which had a drawing of a pile of money with a shovel in it, $1,666,675.00.

I put this in an envelope and sent it to my tax accountant as well.

A week after that however, there was another yellow envelope, "Last Chance ... Active Subscriber," it said in the front. There was a red dot I could peel off in the front of the envelope that read, Eligibility Validation ... prize and under it was a rectangle ... that read, Forfeit, on it. ... place to affix the ... Inside ... was also the inform... I would get a free ... panoramic camera and photo album ...

"We'd hate to give your grand prize to someone else," Kenneth Godshall wrote. "With money like this backing you, your financial options would be wide open to say the least. You could travel the world and stay at five star hotels in Venice, Paris and Madrid, or you could build the dream home you and your family would deserve."

Then there was the place where I could put the black forfeiture sticker, "Affix the forfeit seal to pass up your eligibility," it read directly under it. Apparently, they didn't think I had much in the brain department. One interesting thing was that my exclusive prize entry number was now GS4N70E33, a whole different kettle of fish from NL4JNCA3, There was clearly some hanky panky going on here. Well, I sent this down to my tax accountant in Florida as well and shortly after that a truck hit him and we were never able to find any of my Time magazine stuff again. A month and a half-later, Time Warner succumbed to America Online.

I might not think that Time Magazine was so desperate to get my thirty-four dollars if I hadn't also had a bad experience with Life magazine which is a publication of Time Warner. Back in December my subscription to Life ended. At the time, I was thinking of making a change, five magazines is about the limit at our house and I was seriously considering taking on something called Wired Magazine because I had seen a copy in the drugstore and it seemed so much thicker and more interesting than any of the five I was getting. Besides, it had something to do with computers, which I thought might not be a bad thing to have kicking around the house.

The truth is, I just let the Life magazine subscription lapse. They sent me a renewal, I threw it away. Maybe I'd take on Wired, maybe I wouldn't. That was December. On January 6, I received a letter from a place called the Billing Center in Tampa, Florida that was writing on behalf of Life Magazine.

JUNIOR KROLL
© BETTY PARASKEVAS AND MICHAEL PARASKEVAS.
Junior Kroll pleaded to stay up late
For the Academy Awards; at half-past eight,
He was ready with the chips and the popcorn bowl.
Junior checked his picks with Grandfather Kroll.
They both agreed whom the winners should be.
And there was someone they both wanted to see
Take home an Oscar for Production Design.
His name was Rick Heinrichs. By half past nine
Both Junior and Grandfather started to yawn.
They hoped to catch a glimpse of Rick's lovely wife Dawn.
But the high point in fashion was a lady with a green
Twenty-inch turban that was starting to lean.
WIth the help of cue cards presentations were made
By short-sighted stars and an endless parade
Of teary eyed winners so eager to share,
As long as the Oscar remained in their care.
Then at last came the moment; Junior Kroll gave a cheer.
"For Production Design, the winner this year Is Rick Heinrichs for The Legend of Sleepy Hollow."
And as for the other awards that would follow,
The names of the winners would have to keep
Until morning for Junior had fallen asleep.
THIS is JUST Toooo LONG!

Palm Pilot

The Next Infrared, Cute, Zap Gun, Stock Ticker, Address Book And Language Translater

By Dan Rattiner

Executives from an American computer company hosted their counterparts, from a Japanese multinational, last week at Gurney's Inn in Montauk. At the first meeting everyone was introduced all around and then instead of exchanging business cards which is a usual Japanese custom, the participants pointed their little handheld devices at one another – mostly they were palmpilots – pressed a button and each zapped a cyber business card from one to the other. The cards were all automatically entered into the plampilots' alphabetized telephone directory. They could later be pulled up on the screen as an image.

I was talking to someone who was attending this conference who told me about it.

"It's a fairly common practice; it's just assumed everyone has a plampilot."

"It sounds almost sexual," I said. "You hold something out and bingo, you're pregnant."

We were sitting having lunch at the Sen restaurant in Sag Harbor and my friend was demonstrating his little palm pilot to me. There was an address book with telephone numbers, a meeting scheduler for the year, a graphic section where you could display business cards and a place where you could write down notes as they occurred to you. There was also a modem where you could get stock quotes and retrieve your email and most interesting – though I think a bit pretty much useless – there was a place on the palmpilot where you could read a book. You get the software for the book and load it in. Then you put page one on the screen, press a button for page two or have it slowly scroll along, although it seemed to me it seemed to blur the lines as it moved.

"You can adjust the speed," my friend said as he wiggled the up and down arrow. He also showed me how you could enter notes. Using a pointer you could touch the screen and draw "A" and a little typed "A" would appear in the upper left hand corner. If you made a dash to the right, the cursor would put a blank space in and then you could type "R-O-S-E," which I did, and eventually complete "A ROSE IS A ROSE IS A ROSE." We then stored that as some kind of important note. Well, it is, both, I think.

"It sounds almost sexual," I said. "You hold something out and bingo, you're pregnant."

I was considering the idea of buying one of these palmpilots – the new ones cost about $600 – to replace the more old fashioned ways of getting around in life. I know the palmpilot has been around for a long time and since it only weighs about an ounce and half it was certainly less cumbersome than my way.

My current system of getting through life includes business cards – real ones, not cyber ones – and a red hardcover book that is my year 2000 diary and into which I write anything of importance. I carry a pen. Also a cell phone. In my car I've mounted a little yellow pad on my dashboard so I can write down two or three word notes as they occur to me.

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Here's A Bunch Of Stuff About Parking Meters, Attempted Murderers And Underwater Elephants

By Dan Rattiner

To keep up with the news, an editor has to be well informed. As for me, I read everything that has to do with this area. Or has to not do with this area. I find things that are long and complicated. I find things that are very short. I rip out the stories and put them in my file. When the file gets full, it's time to empty it. Now's the time.

In Riverhead, a John Zabo, fifty-two, was sentenced last month to time served, which was one year in jail, for being part of a plot to kill several Suffolk County officials by putting radium in their toothpaste and cars. Zabo, a former Defense Department employee, had snuck the radium out of the Grumnan plant up-Island, and had given it to John Ford of Bellport who was supposed to plant it. The scheme had been hatched by Ford, who was convinced that Republican officials in town were keeping the information that aliens had been landing in flying saucers in the Pine Barrens hush hush. Both Ford and Zabo were caught. And part of a defense that failed was an expert's testimony that radium in toothpaste and cars would take twenty years to cause harm to anyone.

Researchers at Butler University in Indiana have conducted a survey on the most memorable moments in a person's life. The results were published in this months American Psychological Society Journal. Turns out that the most memorable moment was not a person's first sexual encounter, which is what those conducting the survey had predicted, but a person's first kiss. The first sexual encounter did not even finish second. Second was the first kiss with the person the respondent was currently in a relationship with. Third was the first sexual encounter.

"The first kiss is usually in a semi-public place, such as in the front seat of a car or saying good night outside the girl's house," said Sarah Fisher who co-authored the report. She reported that the first kiss lasted on average forty-five seconds. The study was done by interviewing 300 middle aged people whose first kisses took place as long ago as 1977.

The City of Miami Beach installed twenty new parking meters that were equipped with computer chips to prevent a new arrival from using the time left over by the last occupant of the parking space. The new meters met with such a public uproar that they have had to be removed.

The meters were state of the art and had movement sensing devices that would tell the main computer inside the meter when a car was pulling out. Say the driver of this car had put in money for an hour, but was leaving after forty minutes. Twenty minutes would be left. A new driver, circling around in his car, would see the empty parking space, would park, and then would examine the meter to see if they could get what they had to do done in the time left. Twenty minutes was twenty minutes.

What they found, every time, however, was that the meter read zero. It took about a week before people began to realize that people were not simply leaving their parking spaces when the time ran out. What was happening was that the meter would sense the movement of the car, would transmit this to the computer chip, and the computer would reset the timer. It was only a matter of a nickel or a quarter, but people, in droves, began calling City Hall. They wanted that thrill they got when they had the twenty minutes left.

John A. Todaro, who is the Parking Superintendent for Miami Beach, ordered the meters removed and sent back to the manufacturer. He wanted to avoid people strangling the meters, which he said those calling him predicted would happen if the meters remained.

In Japan, which as we all know is light years ahead of America in gadgetry, has now got a prototype of a 'Smart Toilet' to keep track of your health. It has been manufactured by Matsushita, and expects to be available commercially by 2003. It will monitor your fat content, urine sugar levels, weight, whether you have gained weight or lost weight, and your temperature. It provides this data by e-mail to both you and your doctor's computer, and it can also provide this information to a 'smart' refrigerator and microwave, which Matsushita is working on, that will digest the information and spit out healthy recipes for you to follow based partly on your needs and partly on what you have put into your refrigerator. (You can wave what you put into the refrigerator in front of one of those supermarket checkout guns. Your refrigerator remembers.)

Forbes Magazine has published the 100 highest earning and attention getting people in America. Many Hamptonites are on the list, including Steven Spielberg, Jerry Seinfeld, Sean "Puffy" Combs, Peter Jennings, Diane Sawyer, Martha Stewart, Tom Brokaw and Tom Hanks. Number One on the list was Michael Jordan, not from our area.

A dog that created a lot of revenue for lawyers and changes in New Jersey law involving dogs has died. He was ten years old, his name was Taro, and he died in Westchester County, to which he had been banished by Governor Whitman in 1994.

"For a big dog like Taro, this is just about the time they go," said Lonnie Lehrer, who owned the dog in Paterson, New Jersey when the trouble started.

Taro bit Lonnie Lehrer's niece Brie Halfond on the lip at a Christmas party in 1990. Brie had been waving a chicken bone in front of him. Neighbors learned of the incident, however, and they reported Taro to the police. Earlier in the year, Taro had killed two of the neighbor's pets.

Taro was arrested, taken to the pound, and a panel of dog experts decided Taro had to be executed for his misdeeds. The Lehrers objected, however, and a legal battle ensued which headed toward the Supreme Court. Could a 'panel' rather than a Judge sentence a dog to death?

The legal battle made national news. Taro was on death row. The Japanese government offered to take him. Akitas are a Japanese breed. In 1993, the Aga Kahn wrote a letter to then Governor Florio asking that the Governor consider leniency for Taro. Later in the year, Bridgitte Bardot asked the Governor to released Taro because, after two years on death row, he had "paid his debt to society." The following year, the new Governor, Christie Whitman, commuted Taro's sentence but ordered him banished from New Jersey. A couple in Bedford, New York, in Dutchess County, took the dog, with the Lehrers being allowed visitation. It was up in Bedford that Taro died, of natural causes.

Between then and now, however, Taro's plight made another kind of history. The law was changed. No longer would a dog's behavior be judged by a panel of experts. From now on those wishing to have a dog put down will have to persuade a State Judge.

Scientists have now concluded that elephants once lived in the water, using their long trunks to "snorkel" when walking in deep water. A researcher from the University of Melbooure, Australia, R. V. Short, says "there is a wealth of evidence to show that the elephants and the sea cows share a common ancestor." That was fifty million years ago.

I know the cell phone can cause accidents and in the car I use a plug-in earpiece that seems to be about as distracting as talking to a passenger sitting next to you, although to the outside world you look like a blithering idiot.

Everything about the palm pilot looked good to me – until I tried entering a note. You had to write all capital letters and it didn't seem to get them all right all the time, which was a distraction in itself.

"The future of this stuff," my friend said, "is wearable computers. I've seen them demonstrated at a convention by IBM. You just shake hands with somebody and you've transferred you business card to them."

"Where do you wear the computer?" I asked. "Around your chest like a chest protector?"

"Oh, just about anywhere," he said. "The one I saw was in the heel of a man's shoe. There was a refrigerator with something like a doormat in front of it. He stood on the doormat, opened the refrigerator and by opening it a written list of the contents of the refrigerator were transferred by a computer inside the refrigerator through the handle into the heel of the shoe. The man could now know exactly what was in the refrigerator and the computer in his heel could, if he wanted, provide him with a list of the things he could cook from its contents.

It also could provide him with a list of the things he ought to buy at a grocery store to bring it back up to a level it had been preprogrammed with. That information in fact was already transmitted to the grocery store computer."

"They had a grocery store at the demonstration?" I asked.

"No, but they had a grocery store computer, something you could buy from. And then, when you decided you wanted to go to the grocery store and go shopping, you could press a button and clerks could load a bag with what you need to bring it up to snuff."

"Amazing," I said.

"They have all kinds of information they can transfer from a wearable computer to a hand just by touching. You could transfer your resume, for instance, or your medical records."

"I don't know if I like this," I said. "Can you imagine some candidate on the campaign trail and he's out shaking hands for votes but his wearable computer is set up wrong so everybody he shakes hands with knows he has hemorrhoids?"

The whole thing, I told my friend, reminded me of a joke I heard years ago in college. Wouldn't it be interesting, the joke went, if men had their sex organs on their index finger and women had theirs on their shoulder and you could go up to a stranger and tap her on the shoulder and say, "Excuse me, miss, is this the way to Central Avenue?" •

read. "Dear Mr. Rattiner, Something is seriously wrong, your subscription order for Life was processed some months ago and since then you have received several notices from Life and from us at the Billing Center."

What they meant was they had sent me a renewal request, which I had ignored. But that was enough for them.

"We must now insist upon immediate payment of the amount due as indicated above. As soon as we receive payment your subscription to Life will be re-instated. The amount due is $34.76."

On February 22, I got a letter from David Lewis the Credit Manager of Life Magazine at the Billing Center in Tampa Florida.

"Dear Mr. Rattiner, I warned you about your name being placed on Time Inc. Bad Debt File. We were forced to pursue this course of action due to non-payment in the amount of two dollars and eighty cents for your Life subscription."

Two dollars and eighty cents? I looked at the top of the invoice. It said the total cost was $34.76 and that I had paid $31.96 leaving a balance of $2.80. I have no record anywhere of having done any of this.

"It is imperative you send payment today or contact us at once." Mr. Lewis ended. "Failure to comply will force us to begin collection proceedings."

play review: the wizard of oz

By Jerry Cimisi

"If I only had a brain..."

The refrain of many of us, perhaps, after a mental lapse, but it's the eternal lament of the Scarecrow in The Wizard of Oz. The straw man seeking smarts is, of course, one of the characters out of the imagination of the Frank L. Baum book which the 1939 movie emblazoned into the popular consciousness. This past weekend the very capable children's theatre group, Stages, put on the boards at Bay Street their rendition of this classic.

Now when a theatre group picks such a popular piece, the good thing about it is that you have immediate audience recognition; the bad thing is the performance has to live up to the expectations a previous production has established: in this case the movie in which Judy Garland, as Dorothy, took firm hold as the apotheosis of the role of the little girl who, with her dog Toto, gets taken up from the heartland by a tornado and is deposited in the land of Oz – and says the line that is probably in Barlett's: "Toto, I don't think we're in Kansas anymore."

This is the thirty-first production Stages, under the direction of Helene Leonard, has presented to East End audiences. The theatre company's The Wizard of Oz was certainly a faithful rendering of this by now timeless story.

Caitlyn Amanda as Dorothy, Erin Harris as the Sacrecrow, Isaac Klein as the Tinman and Craig Schenck as the Cowardly Lion were the foursome seeking the Wizard of Oz so he might grant each their most burning wish.

Ms. Amanda played Dorothy and indeed looked like the young Judy Garland. Only the night before I had seen clips of Garland singing "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" on a news magazine program that played – "for the first time ever" – audio tapes Garland had made for an autobiography that was never published. The problems of Ms. Garland's later life made her speak bitterly of the "over the rainbow" image of her early career, but the plaintive song and Dorothy's quest to return home remains a part of the Garland oveuvre and Caitlyn Amanda mirrored that well.

In fact, whether considering of the role of Dorothy, the Tinman, Scarecrow, or the Cowardly Lion, the only criticism that might be offered is that the actors were too faithful to the movie and might have tried breaking new ground a bit with their parts. Watching Isaac Klien's Tinman, Schenk's Lion and Harris' Scarecrow one had to recall the actors from the movie, Jack Haley, Bert Lahr and Ray Bolger respectively. And although each of the cast was quite good in their roles, this reviewer found Ms. Harris strawman exceptionally well done.

Perhaps most original, simply out of necessity, was Haley Willis as Toto. She had the bark down perfectly. According to the program notes she had her own "role" model, a dog named Bear at home.

Bethany Dellapolla, as the Wicked Witch of the West was perfectly sinister and had a high pitched rant that at times was actually uncomfortable to hear.

Ashley Griswold as Glinda, The Good Witch of the North, was the Fairy Godmother-like figure who blithely welcomed Dorothy to Oz and eventually told her how she might leave. Ms. Griswold gave an easy depth to a brief part.

A surprise was Raphael O' Shapiro in the dual roles as the gatekeeper of the Emerald Palace and the Wizard. As the bearded gatekeeper he had great comic delivery, and as the great and terrible Oz who is discovered to be not so great and terrible, he was almost as good.

After reviewing a good many Stages' productions over the past half decade, there is the inevitable problem of repeating praise for this exceptional children's theatre company. Aside from the main roles there were the eight Guards of Oz and the choruses of younger actors as Muchkins and Winkies. It continues to amaze me that Director Leonard can organize and choreograph such a diverse group of ages in musical numbers using so many performers on stage.

One also had to ponder a bit why The Wizard of Oz has, for the past half century, taken such a hold upon the imagination of millions of people. It is a story of a quest, of course, and that subject has deep roots in the mythology of the psyche. Then there is the fact that the Lion, Tinman and Scarecrow achieve their goals (courage, a heart, a brain) not by any boon from the Wizard but by their own exertions.

In truth, Dorothy is the one who gets her wish – to get back to Kansas – in a more accidental way. She finds out at the end that the magic slippers she has worn since early on in her adventure will grant her wish. She came into possession of the slippers because her house fell on the Wicked Witch of the East and all that was left of her were the slippers sticking out from under the porch. At any rate, she had within her grasp the power to get back to Kansas all along. A lesson in itself.

It is also no big stretch to say that the fear and trembling the Wizard of Oz invoked in his subjects is of the same nature of The Emperor's New Clothes. Rulers rule by means of deception. At least the Wizard, once he is found out, turns out to be somewhat of a nice guy. In fact, he had arrived at Oz much in the manner of Dorothy, a ballonist from Omaha blown to this magical land by the winds.

Stages has brought to various stages on the East End such classics as the one above, along with Wind in the Willows, Jack and the Beanstalk and Cinderella. There have also been the more "modern" children's plays: You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown and Annie. It would be an intriguing effort to create and mount a show never seen elsewhere; in other words, an entirely new work. There must be some out there, at least one work worthy of becoming the next children's classic. •

Stages puts on four shows a year. Look for their next production at the beginning of the summer. The company is also offering a Children's Theatre Workshop, two four week sessions, this summer. Call 329-1420 for info on this and future productions.

After I got this letter there was an item in The New York Times that Life magazine was suspending publication. They would be publishing special editions from time to time, but that would be it. Like Look Magazine and the Saturday Evening Post before it, the times were just no longer appropriate for something like a Life magazine.

Two weeks later – we're talking March 24, here – I received another letter from the Billing Center. "Final Notice: Dear Mr. Rattiner, Your name is about to be turned over to a National Collection Agency for non-payment of two dollars and eighty cents, the amount you owe for your subscription to Life. You will not receive any more notices from us. All further communication with regard to the money you owe will be through the National Collection Agency, an independent outside organization, whose sole purpose is to exact payment for outstanding debts. To prevent collection agency action, remove your name from the Time Inc. Bad Debt File and reinstate your subscription to Life, you must mail your check for the full amount indicated on the attached bill today. Signed, David Lewis, Credit Manager. P.S. This is your final opportunity."

Well, there you have it. I don't know about the Warner part of Time Warner but from my personal experience – and I speak of someone who has years ago gone into the sixty story Time-Life building in Manhattan – I'd like to announce that I've made a decision. I'd like to send fifty cents, two quarters, one to Time magazine and one to Life magazine, for no other reason that I feel so badly for them. I do not need the $1,666,675. from Time Magazine, the digital camera and album, the AM, FM radio and headphones, the trip to Monte Carlo or the $100,000 early bird bonus and I don't even need to have my name removed from the Time Inc. Bad Debt File. I'd like Time Warner to consider this as a gesture of good will, no strings attached, to help get through these difficult times as they merge with America Online. Two shiny quarters, one each. They know where to reach me. •

An Israeli Company, Netline Technologies, is marketing a jamming device about the size of a cigar box, which can block all cell phone calls within a one hundred yard radius. It is called the C-Guard Cellular Firewall, is about the size of a cigar box, and was developed by Israeli intelligence when it was found that a participant in a high level government meeting that was supposed to be top secret had a cellular phone in his jacket pocket that, due to a bump, had turned itself on.

Netline has begun to market the C-Guard in America, but the FCC has gotten wind of it and is investigating. It may be against American law to jam cellular phone calls. A spokesperson for the FCC said they would never have "approved" of such a device, had it been presented to them.

When is selling food at the beach legal without a permit? In Sea Bright, New Jersey, Town officials have decided it is best to turn the other way when people at the beach get on their cell phones and order pizzas or sushi or other foods delivered to them at lunchtime.

As for the restaurants, it's a different matter.

"How are you going to find the people you're looking for?" Steve Katechis, owner of Sea Bright Pizzeria, told The New York Times. "And you send a guy all the way down there, with all those bikinis down there, he's going to stay."

In England, a man named Lord Sutch has died. He was fifty-eight. He was born David Sutch in London, and he was raised by his late mother Nancy, after his father, a policeman, was killed in the Blitz. Sutch had his first name legally changed in the 1970s from David to Lord.

As Lord Sutch, he ran for parliament a total of forty times in twenty-five years, losing every election he ran in by wide margins. His political party was the Raving Sensible Party and his slogan was "Vote for Insanity. You know it makes sense." Sutch would campaign in top hat, oversized gold lame smoking jacket, megaphone and huge VOTE LORD SUTCH stitched on his jacket, Sutch proposed a total of forty changes in British law, one of which actually happened. That was his proposal to lower the voting age to eighteen.

Sutch shouted these proposals through a megaphone wherever he went. He came to be known as Screaming Lord Sutch. Sometimes Sutch was attended by a naked woman on a horse, at least in his earliest campaigns. This was a former American model named Thann Quantrill. Sutch never married. But he had a son, Tristan, by Thann. Tristan is now twenty-four and lives in America.

Among the proposals Lord Sutch put forward was to round up all joggers and put them on treadmills to provide electric power. He wanted to know why there was only one Monopolies Commission. He proposed that there be no closing hours at pubs, that retirees be provided with heated toilet seats, that fish should be stocked into wine vats so they could be harvested already pickled.

Once, wearing a crown, Screaming Lord Sutch sought admission to the annual full dress Race Week at Ascot. "It really is ridiculous that this should be allowed to happen," commented the Earl of Coventry. "A clown's place is other than Royal Ascot."

In recent years, election officials kept raising the entry fees for those who wished to run for office. They were trying to prevent ludicrousness. A week before Sutch's death, they raised it to the equivalent of $8,000, an amount that Sutch said was beyond his ability to raise.

Sutch was found by his companion, Yvonne Elwood, hanged from a rafter in his London home. He left a note. "It's a bad day for loonies. It's a sad day for democracy," the note read.

Prime Minister Major ordered the following to be released by a spokesperson.

"Screaming Lord Sutch will be much missed. For many years, he made a unique contribution to British politics."

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Glynn

Observations of a New Islander #100
The Channel Wide Club

Our local paper recently published the results of a survey of ferry service conducted by Suffolk County Legislator Michael Caracciolo. There were compliments, suggestions and complaints, the worst of which is the long ferry lines on the North Ferry in summer.

The North Ferry lines are just terrible in summer. Remember the scene in Lawrence of Arabia, where they're crossing the Desert of Aquaba on camelback and everyone is hot, thirsty and ready to kill? That's the exact experience of the North Ferry line, except that no one shares their goat bladder of water.

I've seen the line backed up to the gas station on the Island, and backed up for more than four blocks from the STOP sign in Greenport. A ninety minute wait for an eleven minute boat ride is not as rare as it should be.

Many residents complained that the money spent on a new office building could have gone to making sure all three ferries would be ready and operational by summer. And in the words of Roy Scheider, "We need a bigger boat." (Jaws)

Some residents suggested buying a bigger ferry, like the South Ferry's Southern Cross. Some suggested a better price break for year round residents, especially ones who commute daily. I suggested letting residents buy an annual permit to paste in the window next to the beach permit. Well, all of these suggestions make a lot sense and cost alot of money, so forget about them.

I have some suggestions that make little sense, and cost little money and therefore are far more viable.

First and foremost, since we must wait in hot cars with irritable children, why, oh why, can't we have vendors work the line with drinks, food, ice cream? If that's asking too much, how about just selling us bread and water? As it is, we send a passenger, if we have one, on the risky mission of making it to the pizza parlor and back with drinks and maybe pizza before we board the ferry.

At least the North Ferry has a bathroom now. Thank God, I was getting so tired of taking my little son behind the ice breaker engine with Jaws painted on it, parked where the line turns. And he was getting tired of escorting me behind the train so that people in line would think it was always me taking him...

And what is the deal with the tokens? Wouldn't it be easier to drop a few quarters in the turnstile slot? Instead we struggle to try to flatten the crimped corners of dollar bills in time for the coming boat. As time pressure increases mistakes, we put it in facing the wrong way and it shoots out and sails out on the floor and we're scrambling around for the dollar as the boat pulls away. Half the time, the machine is out of quarters and we have to pester strangers. When all options are exhausted, we explain it to the ferrymen who let us pay on board anyway, so why couldn't we do it that way in the first place? And have you ever tried to get yourself, your packages and your bag through the turnstile? Like pushing a piano into an airplane bathroom. Have you ever gotten that turnstile bar caught between your legs while trying to navigate yourself through? Now, there's a wake up call...

Another thing the North Ferry could do to increase revenue and buy a bigger boat, is charge for sex. I have talked to alot of ferrymen, on both ferries, and they all say that the crew can see alot more that you think from up on high in the wheelhouse. Many people like to join the Channel Wide Club, especially on the North Ferry because there's more time. Well, I say, charge 'em. If they can spent hundreds of dollars on airline tickets to join the Mile High Club, then they can pay an extra twenty to join the Channel Wide Club. We can put the money in a special account for a big new ferry. We could name it, The Merry Ferry, it could have a bumper sticker that reads, If This Ferry's Rockin', Don't Bother Dockin'.

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

In my mailbox this week there was a letter from the district office of the State Assembly of N. Y. that talked about the condition of our drinking water. "On the South Fork, 410 wells were tested. In 30.2% of the samples, pesticides were detected." There was also a little pamphlet that arrived encouraging the use of organic farming methods for home gardens. Suddenly the mainstream seems to be joining the counter culture types in an effort to protect our ground water and the environment at large.

Last fall there was aerial spraying of malathion to try to control a possible epidemic of black Nile encephalitis. We seem to be paying dues for spraying this horrible poison. There is a new lobster disease that is showing up in Western Long Island. Up Island the lobster are deteriorating. They seem to be dissolving. Out on the East End the lobsters look like they've been burned.

They have lesions in their shells. I don't understand what has taken us so long. Did people think we could poison our environment with no repercussions? Obviously we want to stop the spread of a deadly disease but do we need to protect people in ways that will ultimately destroy the animals that we live with and eat? The scientists who recommended poisoning the area didn't count on the heavy rains we had last fall. The run off from the rains carried the poison directing into the bays. There may be other reasons for the problems with the lobsters. It looks like they are also environmental issues. There are radioactive deposits in the headwaters of Peconic River. Brookhaven Lab has had its wings clipped. The Secretary of Energy, Bill Richardson, was here last fall. Christy Brinkley addressed him at a small gathering. She spoke of our concerns about the Millstone Nuclear reactor and the high beam excellerater at Brookhaven and Plum Island. Word came down a few weeks later that the reactor at Brookhaven would not be restarted. There is still a lot of clean up to do but at least we're moving in the right direction.

Years ago my late husband took me on a tour of a nuclear plant. He was pro-nuke. We went through the plant and they showed us a small pellet of nuclear waste. They were trying to make the point that the bi-product of creating massive quantities of energy was relatively small. The problem is that there is no good way to get rid of this waste. We can't put it in the earth. We can't send it into space. We can't put it in the bottom of the sea. What can we do with nuclear waste that won't backfire on our children or our children's children?

There is plenty of documentation to say that some people have taken bribes while constructing nuclear facilities. How much money would it take to convince someone to ignore the repercussions? Can we consciously destroy the planet for future generations? Is it about an inheritance for our children? After all you can't take it with you. The mess we leave our children will become their inheritance.

It isn't good enough to sit at home and complain. We need to adapt "earth friendly" habits in everything we do.

There is a group called "Fish Unlimited" working in our area. The lobstermen have joined efforts with Fish Unlimited to try to understand what is happening and how to turn it around. A press release went out this week to try to improve awareness. The future of the lobster industry on Long Island depends on our efforts at this time. This isn't only a local problem but we have to deal with it to help support our local economy. Local issues are an indicator for what is happening in the rest of the world. We need to start looking at environmental issues on a planet wide basis. After all the ozone layer used to cover us all.

children and according to court papers, rebuffed Ms. Turner's advances. That made her more aggressive, and she began touching him and embarrassing him. Soon, Ms. Turner became abusive. She taunted him, often in front of the 600 inmates. Lockley filed a complaint with his superiors, which resulted in a request that Ms. Turner be transferred. The Warden denied the request. No other disciplinary hearings were held. So, finally, Lockley sued.

Where are they now? John O'Mahoney of the New York Post came up with this:

Kato Kaelin became a radio talk host for a while, then moved to Hollywood Hills. He has been seen at Hugh Hefner's Playboy mansion.

Marcia Clark no longer practices law. She has become a TV commentator. And she wrote a book about the Simpson trial for which she got a $4.2 million advance. The book, Without a Doubt, bombed.

Al Cowlings, O. J.'s football team friend, is a salesman for a shoe and handbag manufacturer.

Christopher Darden has a lucrative law practice. He is busy writing his first novel. His book about the trial, In Contempt, was a best seller.

Mark Furman lives in Sandpoint, Idaho and hosts a radio talk show about crime. He has written two successful books, Murder in Brentwood, about the Simpson murder, and Murder in Greenwich, which is a work of fiction.

Judge Lance Ito continues to soldier on in Courtroom No. 110 in the Los Angeles Criminal Courts building. Mostly he oversees routine cases.

The posh restaurant Mezzaluna went rapidly out of fashion and closed. Now on the site is a new restaurant, Universal Pasta.

The 1993 Ford Bronco is now owned by collector Mark Pulwer of Los Angeles. He paid $75,000 for it.

Fred Goldman has retired from his job in the attorney general's office in Los Angeles and he and his wife Patty have moved to Scottsdale, Arizona. Together with their daughter Kim, they have written a book entitled His Name is Ron.

Faye Resnick, Nicole Simpson's best friend, posed nude for Playboy, wrote a book entitled The Private Diary of a Life Interrupted, and married the wealthy twenty-seven year old heir to the Korbel champagne fortune, Aaron Heck. She runs an interior decorating business out of her L. A. home.

Nicole's dog Kato, who howled loudly the night Nicole's throat was slashed, lives with Nicole's parents in Dana Point, California, and plays with O. J.'s kids, Justin and Sydney, when they visit.

In 1966, Vincent Marino was shot in the buttocks at a club in Revere Massachusetts when police raided it to break up a meeting of the mob. The purpose of the meeting was for more members to divvy up crime in the Boston area. Six men were wounded. Marino was imprisoned, and has been in prison since, awaiting a trial for racketeering.

As part of the pre-trial proceedings, attorneys for Marino have requested that the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration answer yes or no as to whether they had planted a tracking device in Marino's behind at the time surgery was performed to remove the bullets. Marino claimed that in prison, he was asked by a DEA agent to sign a form so the device could be removed from his body.

"We can confirm that the U. S. Drug Enforcement Administration did not implant a tracking device in defendant Vincent M. 'Gigi Portalla' Marino's buttocks," U. S. Attorney Donald K. Stern wrote the court in reply to the request. •

Now wasn't this the way to put an end to the winter? At the Bay Street Disco on Sag Harbor's Long Wharf the other night, Dan's Papers hosted about four hundred and fifty people who whooped and hollered and generally had a wonderful time celebrating at the Second Annual "I Survived the Winter Party."

What we would have liked to have done is walk around, door to door, to every household on the East End and hand out medals. Since we can't do that, however, we decided the next best thing would be to hold a real down-and-dirty party and invite everybody over. (We served "dinner" of chili and beer and we charged for it which is tacky. In fact we charged a little more than the cost. The difference we gave to Southampton Hospital.)

Anyway, after the chili-making competition, after the local talent contest, and after all the

The Hayground School Beyond Boundries Exhibition opened this week at the Ricco Maresca Gallery on W. 20th Street in New York City. The show, which contained 150 pieces, was the result of last year's mentoring program with ten visual artists. Several hundred visitors came for the opening. Collectors and fellow artist purchased pieces. Channel 5 News interviewed student artists for a story they are doing on the project. The work will be on view at the Benson Gallery in Bridgehampton at an exhibition opening on April 15.

If you are looking for a movie with a happy Hollywood ending and then another happy Hollywood ending, then Me Myself I is your flick. If I say anymore I will give it away and away. Sony Pictures Classics gave a private screening at Clearview Chelsea Cinemas with a party at the soon to be trendy Commune on E. 22 St. in Silicon Alley. The new thing in hot events is to use a place that has not yet opened, as this was. The film stars Rachel Griffiths who is in every scene in the movie. Rachael was an Oscar nominee last year for Hilary and Jackie which was based on a true story. If Me Myself I is based on a true story we are all in big trouble. The crowd included the downtown crowd plus quite a few editors and writers.

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival

(featuring films that either takes place in the Hamptons or were filmed here)

April 8th ~ Annie Hall
The epitome of Woody Allen at his very best. It won four Oscars, including Best Picture. Hilarious and thoughtfully melancholy at times... no one can resist this movie~ or should.
Short: Shoto-Kan Karate-do

April 15th ~ David And Lisa The gentle exploration of a mentally disturbed young couple, groping for places in the world~ remains one of the best films on the subject. Performances by the lead couple are marvelous.
Short: 1994 Artists Writers Game

April 22nd ~ Last Summer
Exceptionally strong story of the trials of teenagers playing out explosive games of sexual awakening and status on local beaches. Provocative and jarring, its original X rating has been edited for an R.
Short: Out of the Attic

April 29th ~ Masquerade
A taunting romantic suspense thriller of an ambiguous young man's ambitions and the wealthy wife he might have married for her dowry. Beautiful people and likewise beautiful, close-by locations, highlight the dark plot.
Short: Nice

May 6th ~ Amistad
Based on a true story, the movie chronicles the incredible journey of a group of enslaved africans who over takes their beloved homeland. When the ship, La Amistad, is seized, these captives are brought to the United States where they are charged with murder and await their fate inprison.
Short: Shoto-Kan Karate-do

May 13th ~ The Dain Curse
Fittingly adapted from an early Dashielle Hammett novel, this well produced, film version is crammed full with the smoking-gun intrigue of The Maltese Falcon author.
Short: 1994 Artists Writers Game (Encore)

May 20th ~ Grey Gardens
This somewhat shocking documentary actually remains compellingly poetic and touching. It captures a small portion of the later years of Edith Bouvier Beale and her daughter, Edie (aunt and cousin of Jacqueline Onasis), filmed in their decaying, over grown mansion in East Hampton. Once seen, Edith and Edie, will not soon leave you.

Shoreline...With Mary Foster

What lives in the mysterious deep, and how do they see in the dark?

I found out (and so did five classes of third and fourth graders) when I accompanied marine environment educators Jennifer Kleinbaum, Laura Coyer and Steve Schott on a day of teaching at North Coleman Road School in Centereach.

The Cornell Marine program offers educational programs for schools throughout the county, both in-the-classroom and at the Suffolk County Marine Environmental Learning Center, at Cedar Beach in Southold. Classes such as Whale Wonders, Fishy Facts, and Who's for Dinner are designed to familiarize students with marine mammals, fish, and the food chains of the sea, while Marine Debris and Entanglement helps children become aware of the problem of marine debris and its impact on the marine environment.

I followed Jennifer, Laura and twenty-one third graders into a black plastic tent, ingeniously set up by school personnel to create a pitch black room for the presentation of Ready, Set, Glow, a program about bioluminescent animals and their amazing adaptations in the mysterious deep sea.

"Today we're going to go on an imaginary trip in the deep, dark, sea, and find out what animals live there, and what they look like," began Jennifer. She said we were going to pose a scientific question (a hypothesis) do a scientific experiment (test the hypothesis) and figure out how animals that are bioluminescent glow. Bio, Jennifer explained, means "life" (like the word biology means life-study) and luminescent means "light" (like the word illuminate). Put together, the word means life-light, and it applies to living things (organisms) that produce light by a chemical reaction in their bodies.

All eyes were on Jennifer. The third graders were intrigued.

A graduate of Cornell University with a degree in marine biology, Jennifer has several years of teaching experience under her belt. "Most of our programs go from K-12 and we adapt them to make them age appropriate for any grade level," she had told me earlier.

And now she began her third grade adaptation, less scientific terms, more exciting visuals. We started our journey from the surface of the sea, where we swim, all the way down to the very bottom – 36,000 feet!

Meanwhile, another class of third graders down the hall were busy setting up their own marine aquarium. "Hi, my name is Steve. I'm a marine biologist and I do research for Cornell Cooperative Extension in Suffolk County. Basically, I study underwater vegetation, like seaweed. I will be setting up a marine tank in your classroom for you to observe and take care of when I leave." (The Discovery Tank class is a unique presentation using a low maintenance salt-water aquarium system, left in the classroom on permanent display. It includes local fish species, snails, shrimp, a seastar and invertebrates, plus a ten gallon tank, filter, air pump, sea water, and sand.)

Throughout the class Steve mentioned a few scientific terms, taking care to explain the Greek origins, such as echinoderm, echinos meaning spiny and derm meaning skin. Carefully handling the bivalve filter feeders (hard shell clams, scallops, mussels) and the echinoderm (seastar) that would go into their tank, the kids were eager to ask questions about their own observations... "How do clams eat?" (They could inspect how a clam filters water through a tube [siphon]). "If you break a clam's shell will it die?" (Yes). "When a clam dies, will its shell turn white?" (Yes, that's called bleaching. If the shell sits on the beach the sun will bleach the color out of it.) "What's the big orange spot in the middle of the seastar?" (Their nose. It's how they breath). Did they know that at the end of each leg of a seastar is an eye? And only one seastar per tank – it eats clams, mussels and scallops by pushing its stomach inbetween their shells.

They were fascinated with the scallop, in particular, who kept opening and closing, trying to swim away. Unlike the oyster, which stick to one place, or the hard clam, which digs into the sand, the scallop opens and closes its bivalves [two shells] to swim away from prey. And did they know that unlike mussels or clams, scallops have eyes? Many eyes, and they are blue. I asked Vincent, nine, what he liked about the class. "I liked the scallop, it could blow itself away from its enemies. It looked very sticky inside."

Back in the tent, Jennifer and Laura were handing out glow-in-the-dark objects. "This is the way it might look deep in the water – quiet, no sounds," said Miss Jennifer.

As a finale, we were treated to a few minutes of real footage of an underwater science expedition, deep in the ocean. The lace-like animals seemed to dance. Animals so delicate, they would disintegrate if we brought them to the surface, the narrator (from Eyewitness Ocean) told us. Eerie and pale, they looked more like spacecraft than animals. Stangely enough, we knew the distance to the moon long before we knew how deep the ocean is. Only thirty years ago did we learn that the deepest part of the ocean, Mariana's Trench, drops 36,000 feet. (That's seven miles below sea level, the deepest point on earth, and deeper than Mount Everest is high – six miles.) We have only mapped 1/20 of the ocean's floor. Our knowledge of the deep is little more than a drop in the ocean...

Shop'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

Spring is definitely in the air and shopping is a breeze when the weather is warm and sort of balmy. I thought I would start out in lovely Sag Harbor this week, so let's do some shopping!

At the Carriage House Antiques on Main Street you will find a beautiful assortment of antique furnishings, linens, lamps, china and accessories. Trish's mom Lee took me through the shop and explained the basics of the merchandise. The linens are exceptional, unique to say the least. Stop in and say hi, bet you buy something.

Across the street, at Romany Kramoris Gallery, now through April 20, there is from 20% to 60% off on unique lamps, blown glass, folk art, a gong, decorative objects, cultural artifacts, jewelry, old bricks, CD's, books on art, architecture and design and more. I especially loved the beaded hanging lamps that are hanging throughout the store.

New to Sag Harbor, look for Ira and Perrie Gurfein's Style Bar, a full service day spa, located at 1 Bay Street The spa encompasses two floors totaling 1800 square feet of beauty space. There will be 500 square feet of virtual space which will house better beauty products and cosmetics both branded and private labeled, three manicure stations, two solaces pedicure stations where numerous treatments will be offered, waxing room for the client on the go. There will even be a makeover room where resident make up artist/expert Joan Zandell will give consultation as well as makeup makeovers, using their exclusive quality products. Joan, formally with ABC, and has done the make up for numerous films such as The Godfather, had has done fine fashion magazines and fashion shows. Also, there will be an extensive line of their own body and beauty produces, accessories, candles, perfumes, robes and more. Valet parking will be offered along with car service. Look for the opening soon, I will keep you informed. Call for information, 725-6730.

Do I have a deal for you! At Anne Moore on Main Street, (next to the Bridgehampton Library) in Bridgehampton you can get ready for the Easter Parade, or just any occasion you can think of with the newest spring hats. If you mention reading this sale in my column to Anne Moore, you will get 25% off all the spring hats until Easter Sunday. This sale includes spring garden party hats, wedding hats and sun hats. The hats come in all colors and are custom sized. Additionally, all the fall/winter hats are at 50% to 75% off. Don't forget to mention my name for that 25% off sale!

On my way to Southampton, I stopped at the Sagg General Store in Sagaponack for one of my favorites, homemade chili. I took a homemade chicken pot pie home to go for dinner tonight. No need to cook when you can put an entire meal together here. At Sagg General Store, they are known for the best hamburgers in town, good homemade soups, baked specialties, pies and pastries and birthday cakes that are made to order. Don't forget their hot lunches that are served daily.

Now on to Southampton. I found John Rogers at his new location at 93 Main Street, next door to BookHampton. At John Rogers they are welcoming spring with a spring sale with savings up to 10% to 50% off their merchandise. Call 287-5567 for information.

Don't forget the re-opening of Starfish on Saturday, April 8 in Amagansett Square. I'm sorry I had the wrong phone number in this column last week. The correct telephone number is 267-3455. See you there!

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Easter Shopping!

various doorprize giveaways, which included such things as tickets to Wrestlemania at the Southampton College auditorium (more tacky), we got down to the main event of the evening, which was the beard growing contest.

What we had done here was go down to one of those places that makes bowling trophies and get the biggest grandest trophy you ever saw, one of those things with a figure on the top with arms raised holding a wreath, and so there I was holding this thing, which was first prize and which was about four feet tall, alongside the stage, waiting to go on to make the presentation. The lights were dim, the music boomed, the couples discoed away in the laser lights. I also had, in my other hand, two tickets to the Hearns-Hagler fight on April 15, which were in an envelope marked second prize.

In case you wondered how the judging is done for a thing like this, here is how it works:

"Here's the trophy," the mistress of ceremonies, Janet Hendrickson, said to me about three minutes before. "The guys with the beards are over there. Choose one."

Indeed, a number of gentlemen looking like the Smith Brothers from the Smith Brothers coughdrops box, milled around nervously near by. They had been inspected and found to have been clean shaven on January 30 according to the rules. Now they looked facially pretty well upholstered. I walked over but couldn't possibly make any reasonable judgment in the flashing disco lights.

"Which one of you guys is a fight fan?" I finally shouted over the disco music.

They looked at one another.

"Me," said a tall thin fellow.

"You don't get the trophy," I said. Shortly thereafter, before the cheers of the crowd, I did indeed award the two tickets to the Hagler-Hearns fight to this tall thin fellow who turned out to be James Walsh of Remsenburg. The big bowling trophy, first prize, went to Jim Stakey of Aquebogue. It was that kind of an evening.

I'll tell you what kind of an evening we had here. It was an evening when a teenaged black girl from Sag Harbor named Jeanette Proctor got up on stage in sequins, tights and plastic ribbons and tapdanced her way through "Sweet Georgia Brown" to second prize in the talent contest.

It was an evening when some kids dressed up in costumes from the Empire Strikes Back – one of them had a Yoda mask – and went up on stage and performed a song parody. They didn't win.

It was an evening when the crowd cheered a beautiful blonde East Hampton belly dancer named Ebba, complete with finger cymbals, so that she came back for an encore. She didn't win either.

And it was an evening when a standup comic named Fred Ford of Hampton Bays, cheered on by at least forty people who came down here on a chartered bus from the Bronx, won first prize, which consisted of a one year's membership in the Omni Health Club in Southampton, our most valued prize.

You shoulda been there.

Thanks to our judges, drummer and band leader Jim Chapin, Broadway producer Norman Kean and actor Rick Colitti who judged the talent contest, to Bev Raphael of the Uncommon Market,Michael McKee from the Coach Restaurant and Sybella Pump from Loaves and Fishes, the chili contest judges, to the staff of Dan's Papers who volunteered for this event, particularly Dott Ciacoia who organized it, to Janet Hendrickson, Beverly Sontz, Erica Wohl, Jeffrey Bennett, Virginia Martinsen, Lynann DiStefano and Andrea Kassner, to the dozens of contest entrants, to Bay Street, to Paul Sydney of WLNG, to Zhivago'sDeli, to the dozens of shops and stores thatdonated prizes and to the hundreds and hundreds of people who came to this event and allowed us to raise almost a thousand dollars for Southampton Hospital, thank you. •

DAN TRAVELS

From Here To There

Except that you are riding on tracks with other passengers, there's really not much to link a trip on the Long Island Rail Road and one on the new VIA operation that travels between Vancouver, British Columbia and the most scenic part of the Rockies - to Alberta, Canada. Yes, they are both examples of train travel, but with such a difference that they really shouldn't be involved in the same description.

With this said, let's concentrate on the Canadian version, instituted recently by VIA Rail, and a huge success on many levels. First, the scenery is fantastic (unlike the closeups of both Suffolk's and Nassau's suburban back-yards of the LIRR). Secondly the service is on time, comfortable, and geared to actually pampering the passengers. And then, the Rockies' rail trip is the kind of adventure that opens new vistas with every curve. This is pure delight, made more so by the attention the VIA. Today they remind me of what I recall of LIRR conductors who gave special service to their passengers, even when one is a twelve year old traveling between East Hampton and Islip to visit grandparents.

At the onset of nightfall the train stops; buses pick up passengers to take them to a nearby lovely modern mountain hotel for a dinner, with entertainment, and a comfortable night's stay. Thus at nightfall you don't miss any of the spectacular mountain/lakes, wildlife and rare signs of habitation because of lack of daylight. For some, there's one slight drawback. A very early wake-up call the next morning. Reason? You're re-boarding the train for your seven a.m. breakfast.

This seems a good time to explain about the dining arrangements. Half of your full done car's passengers eat at the first sitting, the other half an hour or so later. All well managed, with drinks served either in your dome seats for those on the second sitting, and those dining earlier in the dining tables located below. This means using the up-and-down somewhat circular stairways at each end of the car – but there are hand rails and the maneuver is relatively easy.

Actually you'll be surprised at the quality and selection of menu offerings – somewhat limited but with sufficient choices so everyone can find something tempting. Comments are usually complimentary to effusive. Train personnel are well-chosen. They are friendly, helpful, and well trained for their positions . Somehow they seem to have a sixth sense about when information is needed, questions that need answering, and "Where can we get the best photographs?" Answer, "the outside platforms at the ends of the cars."

There is a soft drinks and more potent bar mid car of the viewing upper lounge. For those interested in a snack mid morning or afternoon, these treats seem to appear on cue. Yes, the hours aboard tend toward the "full day" type and some people doze occasionally, but most don't want to miss anything.

By the end of the trip, at either Jasper or Banff Springs even those who listened only occasionally have a much better idea of what the Rockies are all about, including details about the building of the can't-be-done feat, the rail link across Canad's wide breadth that linked its East and West – Vancouver and Montreal and also Halifax on the Atlantic.

Although at first the task seemed impossible, man's ingenuity prevailed, and a link between East and West Coast Canada finally unified this country to our north. Engineering techniques not previously encountered were used, the twin rails inches westward, and finally Canada had its much-needed unifying rail link.

The Rockies had been tamed, but only slightly. These gigantic peaks, footed with equally awesome valleys and waterfalls still, are still dominant. You can't ignore them, you can't forget them. –Eunice Juckett Meeker

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"EMPTY SPACES" AT SOUTHAMPTON COLLEGE

There's bound to be diverse interpretations applied to Juana Valdes' installation, currently at The Avram Gallery at Southampton College. That's perhaps because the work's meaning (as the exhibit's title, "Empty Spaces," implies) is not evident at first glance – it is "empty" of designated clues which would help us determine what this piece signifies. The accompanying text is no help, either, if we are looking for a narrative, linear explanation. Be that as it may, here's an analysis, if you will, of how this particular critic settled on one possible interpretation.

Initially, we use our sense of sight (an obvious start) and the visable shapes in the separate pieces: circular spider webs; square white material with crosses – a juxtaposition of contradictory configurations. Next, we look closer, noting the aesthetic element of color: monochromatic hues (grey crosses on white cloth) with a few red crosses for emphasis – another opposing formal quality.

Finally, we experience the overall effect: a sense of peace prevails, produced by a minimalist style. Even so, the red cross images belie such calmness as this critic recalls Joan of Arc and the blood of battle. (Joan's armor would also match the color of the grey cross). Here's where individual filtering appears, this one deriving from a recent film just seen about the young French heroine.

Southern Cross 2000

But interpretation can't stop here because it doesn't account for the piece's overall meaning. We look to the minimalist text for possible help:

"She waits, she weaves and wonders about things to come and how the world has formed itself and how will it all end

How the last breath will be a sigh of relief...

"She watches her stories unravel and watches them fall apart and come together again"

The text makes more sense now – perhaps connoting life and death. Do the shapes and colors also mean the same thing? We can certainly imagine that the spider's web is a symbol for the cycle of birth, death and rebirth. Yet, the square's restrictive form signifies the opposite: life begins and ends once we reach its parameters. So what is existence? On-going or ending?

Juana Valdes leaves us hanging – like a spider in its web.

"Empty Spaces" will be on view at The Avram Gallery at Southampton College until April 21.

Honoring the Artist: LeLand Neff

Looking through Leland Neff's assorted notecards is like gazing through a candy store window: each photograph on the notecards duplicates a luscious, delectable nature painting that we immediately want to touch or smell. (The art on this week's cover is similarly attractive, the bouquet of flowers begging to be picked up and caressed/ sniffed.)

LeLand Neff

A penchant for nature comes easily to Mr. Neff – whether this "nature" is beast or man. While horses have served as a prominant subject for his paintings, the human figure has also been important in Mr. Neff's career as a fashion photographer for clients like Bloomingdales and Barneys.

The two seemingly unrelated subjects, horses and humans, have other things in common, according to the artist: " When I'm working on a horse race, for example, I have to have hand-to-eye coordination and accuracy, just like in fashion photography. Also, at the end of the day, I have to be done with the project. You have to pull it off."

Mr. Neff's particular love of horses started at an early age along with his interest in art. "My father was a naval fighter pilot, and I grew up all over," Mr. Neff explains. "Wherever we went, we became involved with the local activities, so when we lived in Texas I started riding when I was three-years-old."

Mr. Neff continued to get involved with other local life styles around the world. After graduating from Pratt Institute with a painting degree, he toured Europe by train, finally ending up in the Caribbean to visit his parents. "I intended to stay only six months," he recalls, "but ended up living there for a year and a half. I became best friends with the native fishermen, doing a series of paintings about them that were exhibited at the only hotel on the island."

Mr. Neff's wonderlust took him to Argentina, near Cordovia as well, where his love of horses again took hold. "I never felt like a city person," he notes. " I loved living in the coutryside of Argentina, where people ride horses into town and hitch them up in front of a store. There was no TV and only one telephone. The people had no idea of wanting to be a 'star.' They were very rooted. I bought some horses and, of course, painted them and their riders. I want to go back; I still have horses there."

While Mr. Neff has since moved to East Hampton from Manhattan, horses are still very much a part of his life; he keeps very busy doing commissions from all over the world. For example, he'll soon be going to Belmont to paint the favorite to win the Tripple Crown. Then it's off to Middleburg, Virginia, where he'll photograph the Stepple Chase. (Mr. Neff says that he also plans on training for the event while he's there, although he won't participate.)

Being the horse enthusiast that he is, Mr. Neff also used the winter here to good advantage, taking lessons in jumping. Future plans call for his exhibiting works at the upcoming Hampton Classics, paintings that cover diverse aspects of equestrian culture, like polo events in England and country fairs in Massachusetts.

We can't help but wonder if Mr. Neff had been some famous cowboy in a past life, given his love of horses. "No," he answers with a laugh, "but one of my relatives was Wild Bill Hickok. No kidding."

Mr. Neff will be teaching landscape courses at The Art Barge this June/July. Call for dates. (267-3172)

Dan's Papers "They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2000

Southampton is the local location in April 8th's "Movies Made Here Film Festival," presented by Dan's Papers who also give you gratis (without cost to you) those beautiful, shiny-slippery newspaper magazines that keep sliding off anything with a slight slant, just like those houses in the California hills. This Dan's Papers "Movie Made Here" is Woody Allen's 1977 classic Annie Hall which won Oscars for Best Picture, Best Screenplay for Woodrow and Marshall Brickman, Best Actress for Diane Keaton and Best Director, of course, Mr. Wood. And a personal acknowledgement from me, to the memory of Ruth Morley, the costume designer who called herself a rag picker. Check out the impact on fashion of Ms. Keaton's outfits.

Annie Hall is fondly romantic for Woody, and naturally it is oozing-full of his shmearing kvetching kriticism that bury his targets with smothering, intelligent wit and blunt incisiveness. In Annie Hall, Southampton gets off easy, taking much less of a beating than California, and those falling houses in the wake of The Wood's verbal mud slides, meant to eliminate those mini Gardens of Eden. And, why not? He's a New York City brat and the wormy Big Apple is THE Holy City to him. You sued to be able to find him regularly at the Wailing Wall of Michael's Pub. These days you can hear him wailing, on the clarinet, of course, in the traveling documentary, Wild Man Blues, by Barbara Kopple.

Annie Hall* (1977)
Screening Date: April 8, 2000

Annie Hall is full of non-comforting nostalgia like flashbacks to his youth in Coney Island and his parents and family that reek of untrammeled ethnicity. He relives moments in Grade School where he and his classmates bizarrely project their futures. These are acutely funny... not cute at all. At the budding age of seven, the eyeglasses-framed, thick beaked, little red head was flowering into full-bloomed neurosis and anxiety. When punished for kissing a girl, his future is set for romance and love. Annie Hall, played by Diane Keaton, is the lover he hangs the movie on. At the start of the film he is filled with remorse, sorrow and pity... their relationship is over. (The Sorrow and the Pity, the massive documentary of holocaust horrors, is his favorite movie on a date!) As Alvy Singer, a stand-up comic, he defines his feeling about life... it's like the joke about the two women at a Catskill resort. One says, "It's a-shame! The food here is so terrible... it's awful!" And, the other says, "Yes, and worse, the portions are so small!" "That's life," says Alvy, "Life is so miserable and on top of that, it's over so fast." That's the way with many of Woody Allen's movies... he makes his personal miseries so funny, we enjoy his masochistic insecurities as much as he does, and we are sorry when the movie is over.

Annie Hall is mostly about relationships and though it begins with Alvy's and Annie's break-up, Woody takes us back to the beginning and through their romance as along the way, we travel in the old VW Beetle in New York, a big convertible in California and airplanes, too. The affair is a bumpy one, but with many cozy moments. Dealing with live lobsters and phobias in the Hamptons, a spider in Manhattan, his past in Coney, his neurotic presence as a Jew, "You notice," says Alvy, "he didn't say, did you eat? He said did JEW eat? "And, when at a dinner of ham, with Annie's family, he imagines himself as a full-bearded Rabbi. Along the way are stars like the Hampton rocker and Blue Parrot diner, Paul Simon and Shelly Duvall, a hilarious Christopher Walken, Marshal McLuhan and glances at future stars like Sigourney Weaver and Jeff Goldblum. There is a carload of merry times as Mr. Woody slings stinging mud at : fame, awards, (Alvy, "And now, the award for the best fascist dictator goes to... Adolf Hitler"), TV (Alvy, "Of course there's no garbage in Beverly Hills... they use it to make television shows"), and so on.

Are Woody's funny little characters like, Alvy, mirror reflections of Mr. Allen himself? They probably are, but the mirrors are the fun house mirrors at Coney Island. They warp, bend, twist, spindle and mutilate the people they reflect. Woody does that too. Then we question: how pulled out of shape are WE when the final frames of Allen's movies fade to black for the closing credits? Are we left with remorse, sorrow and pity for his troubled cast of characters? Or amused?

Let's talk and shmooze on Saturday afternoon April 8th at 3 p.m. at the Ross School Library, 18 Goodfriend Drive, East Hampton. Remember this merriment is FREE... that's F-R-E-E-. So call early for seats to Dan's Papers, 537-0500.

Oh, yeah. To arm you for Woody's assault on your funny bones, a short video on the defensive art of karate will proceed the movie. It is "Shoto-Kan Karate-Do" by Matt Hindra and it is courtesy of LTV Studios.

Guy Jean de Fraumeni is the producer, writer and director of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS and European feature films. He is assisted in this column by Sarah Halsey who hosts with him the above Dan's Papers*"They Made the Movie Here" Film Festival.*

silvia lehrer's cooking column

For me, one of the joys of the profession is to join my culinary colleagues at the annual conference of the IACP, the International Association of Culinary Professionals. This year the event was held in the revitalized and flourishing city of Providence, R.I.

The pleasant ferry crossing to New London was the beginning of an exciting and energizing four days of workshops, master classes, a New England clambake, an awards gala and great dining around this passionate restaurant town.

To kick-off the conference, the legendary Julia Child shared the culinary stage with Emeril Lagasse and Martin Yan, inspired by the "Three Tenors in Concert." The maestros cooked in duet and in trio and their edible antics had an audience of culinary professionals bursting with laughter. The proceeds from this special virtuoso performance benefits culinary scholarship, research and world hunger relief.

A stay in Providence would not have been complete without dining at Al Forno's restaurant. Johanne Killeen and George Germon, the husband and wife chef owners, who became enamored of Italian cuisine when they lived and traveled throughout Italy, had careers as photographer (Johanne), and sculptor and architect (George.) Their continually evolving art reflects in the sense of design of their restaurant as well as in the creative presentation of their dishes. The food they serve has national recognition and they are most famous for inventing grilled pizza. This is pizza like you never, ever experienced before, even in Italy – the crispiest, thinnest crust with the integrity of the toppings, intact. I simply must share with you one of the grilled pizzas from their book, Cucina Simpatica, Harper Collins.

PIZZA DOUGH

To grill pizza successfully, you will need patience and a few practice runs, but do persevere, say Johanne Killeen and George Germon, authors of Cucina Simpatica, Harper Collins. They prefer hot wood or charcoal fire and suggest you build your fire on one side of the grill as you will want a cool area in order to add the toppings without burning the bottom of the crust.
Enough dough for four 12-inch pizzas

For the pizza dough
1 envelope active dry yeast
1 cup warm water
Pinch sugar
2 1/4 teaspoons kosher salt
1/4 cup johnnycake or fine-ground white cornmeal
3 tablespoons whole-wheat flour
1 tablespoon virgin olive oil
2 1/2 to 3 1/2 cups unbleached flour

1. Disolve yeast in warm water with sugar. After 5 minutes stir in the salt, meal, whole-wheat flour and oil. Gradually add the white flour, stirring with a wooden spoon until a stiff dough is formed.

2. Place the dough on a floured board, and knead it for several minutes, adding only enough additional flour to keep the dough from sticking.

3. When the dough is smooth and shiny, transfer it to a bowl that has been brushed with olive oil. To prevent a skin from forming, brush the top of the dough with additional olive oil, cover the bowl with plastic wrap and let rise in a warm place, away from drafts, until double in bulk, 1 1/2 to 2 hours.

4. Punch down the dough and knead once more. Let rise again for about 40 minutes. Punch down the dough. If it is sticky, knead in a bit more flour. Use 6 ounces of dough for one 12-inch pizza.

GRILLED PIZZA MARGARITA

The authors suggest that you may want to have different toppings on hand for a variety of pizzas. Use a judicious hand, and suppress the natural tendency to cover the entire surface of the dough.
Serves 2-4 as appetizer

6 ounces pizza dough
1/4 cup virgin olive oil for brushing and drizzling
1/2 teaspoon minced garlic
1/2 cup loosely packed shredded fontina
2 tablespoons freshly grated Pecorino Romano
6 tablespoons chopped canned tomatoes in heavy puree
8 basil leaves

1. Prepare a hot charcoal fire, setting the grill rack 3 to 4 inches above the coals.

2. On a large, oiled, inverted baking sheet, spread and flatten the pizza dough with your hands into a 10- to 12-inch free-form circle, 1/8 inch thick. Do not make a lip. You may end up with a rectangle rather than a circle; the shape is unimportant, but do take care to maintain an even thickness.

3. When the fire is hot (when you can hold your hand over the coals for 3 to 4 seconds at a distance of 5 inches), use your fingertips to lift the dough gently by the two corners closest to you, and drape it onto the grill. Catch the loose edge on the grill first and guide the remaining dough into place over the fire. Within a minute the dough will puff slightly, the underside will stiffen, and grill marks will appear.

4. Using tongs, immediately flip the crust over, onto the coolest part of the grill. Quickly brush the grilled surface with olive oil. Scatter the garlic and cheeses over the dough, and spoon dollops of tomato over the cheese. Do not cover the entire surface of the pizza with tomatoes. Finally, drizzle with 1 to 2 tablespoons of olive oil.

5. Slide the pizza back toward the hot coals, but not directly over them, Using tongs, rotate the pizza frequently so that different sections receive high heat; check the underside often to see that it is not burning. The pizza is done when the top is bubbly and the cheese melted, about 6-8 minutes. Serve at once, topped with the basil leaves and additional olive oil, if desired.

There's Always Time For Alaska Salmon

After a long day at work, many people are looking for something quick, easy and healthy to prepare for dinner. Why not try Alaska salmon? Although it's well known that full-flavored fish, such as Alaska salmon, can be a healthy addition to any diet, many of us don't know how fast and simple it can be to prepare at home. In just minutes you can prepare flavorful Chili-Rubbed Sautéed Alaska Salmon, perfect for both a weekday dinner and weekend entertaining.

Alaska salmon ranks among the world's finest seafood. In the cold, clean Alaskan waters the five species of wild salmon-king, sockeye, silver, chum, and pink-grow in an environment that is one of the most pristine in the world. This healthy environment combined with their natural diet of shrimp, herring, squid and other marine life, provides Alaska salmon with superior flavor and a lean, firm texture.

Choosing quality seafood isn't hard. Fish should have a moist, shiny appearance, and smell ocean fresh. Alaska salmon is available fresh or fresh frozen in four convenient cuts: whole and dressed, roast, steak, and fillets. Whatever the cut, a simple rule is to allow 10 minutes of cooking time per inch of thickness, measuring fish at its thickest part, or until the salmon flakes when tested with a fork. Salmon will continue to cook once removed from the heat.

Along with its great taste and convenience, Alaska salmon is also a healthy addition to any diet. Salmon has a high protein, vitamin and mineral content, and is low in saturated fat. In fact, Alaska salmon is one of the best natural sources of omega-3 essential fatty acids, the "good-fat."

Omega-3's offer a wide range of health benefits including reducing the risk of heart attack, hypertension, breast cancer, some kinds of arthritis and even depression.

Here's an easy and delicious recipe to get you started cooking Alaska salmon. Ready in just minutes, it has just enough spice to wake up taste buds. Feel free to adjust the herbs and spices to suit your own tastes.

CHILI-RUBBED SAUTÉED ALASKA SALMON

2 teaspoons chili powder
2 teaspoons dried dill weed
1 teaspoon lemon pepper
1/2 teaspoon ground cumin
4 (4 to 6-ounce) Alaska salmon steaks or fillets, thawed if necessary
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
Lemon wedges

1. In small bowl; mix together chili power, dill, lemon pepper and cumin.

2. Pat mixture evenly on both sides of each salmon steak.

3. Melt butter in large non-stick skillet over medium heat; add salmon.

4. Saute 10 minutes per inch of thickness, turning once. Serve with lemon wedges.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

We've all seen pictures of those glorious window boxes overflowing with colorful flowers, often with cascading greenery that grace the windows of city townhouses and country cottages. The plants of choice are annuals, because no other type of flower costs so little with such high rewards. Clustered together in a window box, the right combination of annuals can provide a stunning, mini-garden for all to enjoy.

Window box gardens are especially favorable because they can be put together in a jiffy and last for months, becoming more beautiful as the season wears on. Annuals don't mind overcrowding and for this reason, it is possible to plant them close together for the masses of foliage and color they are so well known for.

The window box garden requires the right container in the right space. Select windows that you will be able to see every day, so your window box garden can be enjoyed to its fullest. Many homeowners choose windows on the front of homes so neighbors and passers by can enjoy them too. Decide what size window box will be suitable. If windows are narrow, then a smaller, narrower window box will work best. If the windows are wide or double, choose longer window boxes.

Window boxes can be purchased or custom made. Most garden centers sell plastic window boxes, usually available in white, green or terracotta. Complete with drainage holes, these types of window boxes are easily placed on brackets under most windows. Be sure they are securely fastened, as the planters can be quite heavy once soil and plants are in place. Do not secure boxes permanently. You will need to remove them each season to replace the soil. Wooden window boxes are often custom made to fit a particular window. If you are handy, you may want to build one yourself. If so, we suggest that you use rot resistant wood such as redwood or cedar to make long lasting window boxes. Drainage holes are particularly important to prevent roots from rotting. Waterlogged roots will not get the air circulation needed. One hole at each end and one in the center is needed.

In the city, flowers are often subject to pollution and stagnant air. Annuals are resistant to these hazards and normally bear no ill effects. Because of a relatively short plant life, they are also not especially susceptible

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Ah! Spring is finally here. It feels great to get outside and do some yard work and start swinging the old sticks again. A little rusty, but that's why baseball players have spring training. A few rounds on the links and well be in good shape!

Another ritual of spring for us in Farm Bureau is our annual Washington lobby days. This year, the cherry blossoms were two weeks early and nearly gone when we got to town. The trees and shrubs and lawns in Washington are way ahead of us on Long Island, and their buildings and grounds are always magnificent – at least we can see where some of our tax dollars are being spent!

LIFB President, Howard Johnson, Past President Phil Schmitt, member Lisa Van Heijnengen and I kept pretty busy on legislative visits. My assistant, Ceil Carpenter, takes care of our appointments and as usual, we were able to see the entire Long Island Congressional delegation personally, with the exception of Mike Forbes, who was at a committee meeting. We did see Lazio, King, McCarthy, and Ackerman. The highlight of this year's trip was a personal visit for a half an hour with US Senator Charles Schumer. It is not very often that you get more than five minutes with a senator. He was well informed and willing to listen to our issues. He has made a commitment to us that he will use his position to help the northeast states as a voting block to ensure that northeast agriculture can get a fair shake. US farm policy is driven by the Midwestern and southern states and at a disadvantage to the northeast. Like Senator Schumer said, the northeast has 1/6 of the US Senate, so they are players. It was refreshing to hear that we truly have a leader in Chuck Schumer.

Anyhow, the following is a little background on the issues we discussed as Farm Bureau priorities.

1) FQPA, the Food Quality Protection Act the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) is reassessing existing pesticide exposure tolerances and deciding which pesticides and pesticide uses will remain available. Our indications are that the EPA is making excessively conservative decisions based on insufficient information, without requiring additional, refined scientific data as specified under the new law. The result is that farmers will needlessly lose valuable pest control products and US farm production may be jeopardized. Foreign growers, able to choose from a wider array of pesticides, will enjoy a competitive edge over US farmers.

2) International Trade (including normalizing trade with China): We call for the government to insist on strict implementation of international trading rules to prevent unfair practices by competing countries, and using all available trade tools to protect and recapture markets taken by countries using subsidized exports and unfair trade practices.

3) Conservation Funding: We support increasing the nations investment in private land conservation, which would address environmental concerns and farmland preservation.

4) Crop insurance: The crop insurance issue has been hot in the last two weeks. Senator Schumer provided an amendment that passed the Senate to ensure agricultural commodities, such as fruits, vegetables and horticultural products, will be covered. Also, $40 million will be included to educate farmers on how to use crop insurance as a risk management tool.

We came away from our meetings with the sense that we had been heard and that our efforts had been productive. And we capped off our trip with our traditional visit to the Capitol Grill for a terrific dinner!

Miniature Gardens Get A Big Hand From Small Tools

Probably the biggest challenge miniature gardeners face is how to maneuver in small spaces. The challenge of adding a miniature water garden, a model railroad layout, water ponds and waterfalls to your backyard landscapes can be great.

Fortunately, a wide range of tools designed for small gardening tasks are now available. These tools can also handle such miniature construction jobs as digging drainage ditches, building track beds, splitting rocks, laying stones and contouring the tiny landscape. The tools, called MiniGroundbreakers Landscaping Tools, make tackling the miniaturized construction jobs required by these specialty gardens easier.

A spokesman for V&B Manufacturing company says these tools, which vary in length from sixteen to twenty-six inches, have multi-tasking toolheads that help the gardener work in various size spaces and from different positions without changing tools.

Short handled and lightweight, the tools a Mini-Tille, a Mini-Plante and a Mini-Pick-are designed with a "hammer swing" action that permits the tool head to do most of the work. Because of the multi-purpose tool heads, they are considered ideal as "start-to-finish" tools with each tool providing a deep-digging mattock blade in combination with specific purpose head for planting, trenching or tilling.

More information about these miniature garden tools is available by calling V&B at 800-443-1987 or by visiting the company's web site at www.hammernet.com/releases.htm.

to disease.

Select plants that look fresh and are insect free. Look at the underside of leaves to check for disease and mold. If the foliage is nice and green, the stems are not leggy and there are lots of buds, they are probably in good shape.

Before you buy any plants, take time to decide what you want. Decide on a color scheme, using at least two colors, perhaps three. Combine compatible colors for the best impact. For example, white, pink and blue, or red, yellow and orange.

If your window box garden is in full sun, consider Ageratum, lantana, portulaca, marigolds, petunias, Dusty Miller and geraniums. If your window-box garden will be in mostly shade, use impatiens, lobelia, browallia, fusha, coleus and pansies.

Purchase ordinary potting soil for your window box garden, and mix it 50/50 with compost. This mix is excellent and contains all the elements needed for a contained garden and will not become compacted. Fill the boxes almost to the top, leaving a few inches. Set the plants according to your plan. Vary the colors, heights and textures in a pleasing manner. Upright and taller plants should be placed in the back, and anything that trail at the edges, either at the sides or in front. Once planted, water well.

Continue to water each day if neccessary. Check your window box garden every day, even during rainfall. Pinch back dead blossoms and brown or torn foliage on a regular basis to promote flowering. Foilar feed, using fish seaweed once a month during the growing season.

Fine Furnishings

Porcelain Versus Ceramic Tile

What's out is what's in fashion for home decorating in the new millennium. Designs and colors from the Great Outdoors are a major influence on the way we decorate the insides of our homes.

We keep looking back: back to nature and natural materials, cottons, sisal and ceramic tile that have been around for centuries. Today, however, natural materials aren't found only in nature. Many manufactured materials may look like "natural beauties," but offer man-made advantages like lower cost, longevity, and easy care.

Certainly, the Luddites, those anti-industrialists of early 19th-century England, would be impressed by some of the new tiles from Crossville Porcelain Stone/USA, the only manufacturer of large-size porcelain tiles in the U.S. The company's designers have turned ordinary natural materials-earth, fire and water-into look-alikes for natural stones, marble, slate and limestone.

Crossville's "Limestone" porcelain stone tiles look as if they've just been brought up from a richly veined quarry. Actually, porcelain stone tile is man-made of natural ingredients and fired at extremely high temperatures, so it offers greater durability than natural stone (thirty percent harder than marble) and won't stain or fade on even tough floors.

The color of porcelain tile goes all the way through, unlike ordinary ceramic tile which is color-glazed only on the surface. Keeping porcelain tile clean requires soap and hot water-no waxes or sealers are needed.

Frost-resistant porcelain tile can be used outdoors as well as inside. "Vermont" porcelain slate-lookalike tiles are rugged and handsome, so a tile floor can start inside a kitchen or great room and run across the patio into the garden and around the pool.

Lovers Of Brass Take A Shine To Non-Tarnish Finish

Lovers of polished brass are trumpeting the praises for a new state-of-the-art faucet finish that is guaranteed not to tarnish, corrode or discolor.

The new non-tarnish polished brass finish, called LifeShine, is so scratch resistant it even stands up to steel wool, not to mention wear and tear from standard household cleaners. Experts say that because it is resistant to salt spray and humidity, it's an excellent choice for homeowners on either coast.

To ensure added strength and durability, the company

And Then There Was Light...

If you're an iMac user, like we are at Dan's Papers, and I am at home, I found a lamp that is an exact match to my purple iMac and is more effective than light, more restful than darkness: e.light is a new lighting source and concept; ideal for your eyes at work and at home. It never overheats and is always ready to move through endless ways of adjustment. The e.light, a luminaire designed and engineered to deliver a limited amount of light, just the right amount of direct light required by the user in the performance of tasks, such as computer operating, writing, reading, etc. with no aid or interference from other lighting.

e.light from Artemide Microlight, is a revolutionary lamp utilizing the latest in cold cathode technology for lighting and is environmentally friendly having a low three watt energy consumption while providing stability of color temperature (3000K) throughout the life of the bulb. e.light epitomizes the category of low energy consumption luminaries due to the Microlight Technology 3-watt lamp while providing light output comparable to 15-watts of incandescent lighting. The highest quality is assured due to the sparing use of materials resulting in a reduced part count made possible thanks to the light and durable illumination system. The long life of the lamp (twenty times higher than average incandescent lamps and two to three times longer than most flourescents) reduces the frequency of replacement, further contributing to the environmentally friendly factor of the lifetime of e.light considerably. Due to the compact size of the bulb and the near absence of heat, fewer materials are required to insulate and protect thereby further enhancing the environmental aspects of the e.light.

The e.light is available in a choice of six vibrant colors of orange, white, red, violet, blue and green, the personal light for your personal computer. The suggested retail price of e.light is $129 e.light and be reached via web at www.artemide.com.

that makes the LifeShine finish, Moen, recently added titanium to the finish. This actually made it stronger. Contractors report that it is the only titanium-strengthened finish available in the true color of polished brass.

"In the past, many homeowners have shied away from traditional polished brass finishes because the finishes could be easily scratched and subsequently required extraordinary care," said Gary Pember, bath group product manager for Moen.

For many homeowners the new non-tarnish finish offers a new alternative-one that features the upscale look of polished brass, yet is easy to clean, and has a lifetime guarantee against tarnishing.

Interestingly, the technology behind the LifeShine finish is based on the advanced technology used to protect the space shuttle.

How To Buy Casual Furniture

The furniture that fills today's decks and lanais, pool aprons, patios, sunrooms, breezeways, porches, gazebos and even living rooms – is a far cry from the lawn furniture of yesteryear. This new generation of furniture is beautiful stylish, and made to last – outdoors.

Casual furniture falls into half-dozen categories, based on frame material: aluminum, resin, steel, wood, wicker/rattan and the wrought and cast metals.

Aluminum is far the most popular material. It doesn't rust, is easy to move, is durable, requires little care, and is available in a wide variety of colors and styles and in a broad range of prices.

Steel furniture has been popular since the 1940s. It is heavy, extremely durable, less expensive than many other frame material, and, if not properly prepared and coated by the manufacturer and maintained by the owner, is guaranteed to rust.

Resin furniture is the darling of the outdoor furniture in Europe, where it commands upward of ninety percent of the casual furniture market. Resin is actually polypropylene, a plastic to which chemicals have been added to enhance strength, whiteness, resistance to dirt and to the sun.

Resin can sell for $5.99 a chair or $2,000 for a set. The difference is not discernible by the naked eye. Better resin furniture uses more raw material (it's heavier) with superior weather-fighting chemicals and has a glossier finish.

Wicker is not a material; it's a method of weaving. Anything from sea grass to reed to synthetic materials can be woven into patterns called wicker. Weather-resistant wicker is a special category that is tremendously popular today. It has been treated to allow constant outdoor use, and is sun-proof, rainproof, snow-proof and chlorine-proof.

Wrought iron has been around since the 1920's and is characterized by elegant, traditional design. It is actually steel that is hammered and bent (literally "wrought") to form graceful curves. Wrought aluminum duplicating the grace and style of wrought iron is lighter and easier to maintain.

Cast iron and cast aluminum are formed when molten metal is poured into molds. Cast pieces usually feature intricate, traditional designs that reflect eighteen-century styling.

Wood furniture is available in pine, white oak, redwood, cypress, teak, mahogany, cedar, maple, birch and beech, as well as an array of exotic African hardwoods with names such as bubinga and ovengkol. Because the exotic woods, including teak, are often harvested from tropical rain forests, look for a seal of approval from Friends of the Earth, or certification that the wood was plantation harvested.

For more information on casual furniture and the outdoor room, call 1-800-852-2144 for a free copy of Casual Décor, a 64-page guide to outdoor/indoor furnishings.

The Outdoors Goes Upscale

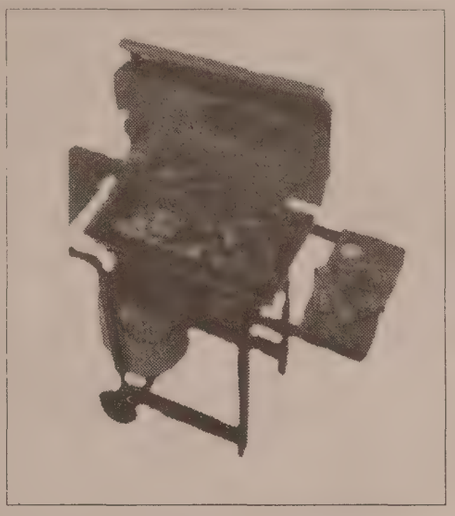
The backyard continues to go upscale and to incorporate many of the finer features associated with the indoors. In fact, even the term "Backyard" has given way to "outdoor room" as the designation of choice for this oasis of relaxation.

Demographers cite the aging of baby boomers, trend analysts use terms such as "cocooning" or "burrowing" to explain this desire to be at home, to be comfortable at home, and to enjoy home-related hobbies such as cooking or gardening. Whatever the reason, the Outdoor Room has come to incorporate the Four "F's": Food, Furniture, Fire and Flowers.

Food: Gas grills are one of the hottest products around. Last year, their sales exceeded those of the much less expensive charcoal grill. In 1987, 3.6 million gas grills were sold; in 1997, that figure was 6.4 million. And the demand seems to be for higher quality, more expensive grills, with all the bells and whistles of a true kitchen – stainless steel construction, rotisseries, side burners, shelves, and even refrigerators. Consumers seem very willing to spend upwards of $1,000 (sometimes as high as $5,000) for such amenities. The highest quality gas grills are every bit as good as indoor units.

Furniture: All outdoor rooms must have a table and chairs, for dining, relaxing and conversation and the hottest seller is cast aluminum, with its elegant detailing. My favorite, all-weather wicker is also in great demand, in chairs, rockers, couches and side tables.

The stunning market umbrella, introduced over a decade ago, has maintained its appeal and teak chairs; benches and tables are now seen as sculptural additions to patios and lawns. The highest quality outdoor furniture is every bit as good as indoor furniture (and is used indoors quite frequently).



Fire: In upscale, custom settings, outdoor fireplaces are being designed by architects in surprising numbers. Builders are beginning to offer them as options in new construction and some manufacturers have created units that are portable, easily moved from place to place.

The fire becomes the focal point of the outdoor room, much as it has indoors. It takes the chill from a cool summer's evening, and extends the outdoor season at both ends of the calendar. The best outdoor fireplaces are every bit as attractive as their indoor cousins.

Flowers: They were there in the beginning, and have continued as a strong trend through the years. Gardening, primarily flower gardening, is a hobby attracting more and more people. Arbors, trellises, birdhouses and feeders, and gazebos are entering the outdoor room as significant design elements.

And water gardening is flourishing; consumers are spending the time and effort to create ponds landscaped to fit naturally into their setting. There is nothing indoors that can match the beauty of a well designed flower garden or pond.

For additional information on outdoor furnishings and the outdoor room, call 1-800-852-2144 for a free copy of Casual Décor.

Health Tips To Take To Heart

Here's some news you should take to heart. Heart disease is a leading health concern among Americans. Although certain factors that increase the risk cannot be changed, such as age, gender and heredity, there are lifestyle choices within your control that can help prevent heart attacks.

As new research disputes existing truths, making heads or tails of the conflicting information on heart-health can be challenging. more.com's Nutrition Editor, Janet Lepke, R.D., C.D.E., provides a reality check on some of the most popular heart-health myths:

Myth 1 – "It's all about the fat." Fat in the diet is only part of the equation. You should limit your total fat intake to 30 percent of total calories and look for foods that have a low amount of saturated (a.k.a. "bad") fat, which can clog the arteries. Unsaturated fats, such as those found in olive and canola oils, are your best choices.

Myth 2 – "Too much coffee causes heart attacks." Caffeine is well known to raise blood pressure, heart rate and basically wake you up, but it hasn't been clinically proven to cause heart disease.

For you heavy coffee drinkers, excess caffeine may contribute to elevated cholesterol levels, which is a precursor to heart disease.

So if you must, enjoy one to two cups of java per day and then move on to a decaffeinated blend.

Myth 3 – "No more red meat." Unfortunately, red meat has received a bad rap. In moderation and as part of a balanced diet, red meat is an important source of iron, B vitamins and protein.

Red meat can be enjoyed three to four times a week in three- to four-ounce servings (the size of a deck of cards). Red meat does contain saturated fat so look for leaner selections.

Myth 4 – "Red wine, please..." Recently, red wine has been spotlighted as a tasty way to thwart heart disease. Research indicated that the incidence of heart disease in those who consume moderate amounts of alcohol (average one to two drinks per day) is lower than for non-drinkers.

One suggestion, if you are so inclined, is to limit red wine to no more than two four-ounce servings a day.

Finally, before making significant lifestyle changes, consider researching online to become more educated about your choices as a supplement to consulting a physician.

POLICE BLOTTER

A Montauk man was arrested after allegedly taking the law into his own hands. Fred Hoffman of Southampton was driving on Napeague, when Edward P. Curry, forty-four, of Kirk Avenue allegedly began tailgating him, then passing and cutting him off.

This was not the first time Mr. Curry and Mr. Hoffman had met. According to police, Hoffman said that Curry had pulled up behind him a week earlier flashing his lights, "making like a police unit." When Hoffman stopped, Curry allegedly told him he was going sixty-five in a thirty and then drove off.

After their second encounter, the two men proceeded to East Hampton Police headquarters to file complaints against each other. Curry was arrested for modifying his vanity license plate "MONTAK" to read "MONTAUK" He also had a police scanner in his car, both are misdemeanors.

An unknown intruder broke into a home on Montauk Highway in Bridgehampton. The burglar gained entrance through a window. The only missing items were a bottle of wine valued at $12 and $5 in change.

A Deer Park man was driving on Old Montauk Highway in Montauk, when a paintball commando assaulted his 1998 Hyundai. The battery of white paintballs caused $200 in damage.

An East Hampton woman called the police to report a series of unwanted phone calls in which the caller hangs up. Police have no suspects and are working on the case.

A shrubbery stealer struck on Mount Misery Drive in Sag Harbor. The stolen pair of shrubs are valued at $80.

A Wainscott resident called police to report that a neighbor had moved her shrubbery without authorization in order to install a stockade fence. She did not want her shrubs moved.

The Town of Southold Police were alerted that a sickly seagull was loitering at the Southold School. Police advised the concerned citizen that nature would soon take its course for the bird.

A Greenport man's dog ran into the water at Stirling Basin and would not come out according to police. The man then went in after him and tried to drag the dog from the frigid water. A passerby then pulled both the man and his best friend out. The Greenport Rescue Squad treated the man for hypothermia.

A man was arrested for allegedly urinating against a pole on Canal Road in Hampton Bays. According to the police report the man's bodily function, "served no legitimate purpose."

A Hempstead man was charged with disorderly conduct for allegedly urinating in the Southampton 7-Eleven parking lot. Apparently he was not serving a legitimate purpose either.

Dan's LETTERS

DAN LOOK-ALIKE?
Dear Dan,

Dan's Papers was one of the newspapers I missed reading after we moved from our home of thirty years in Wading River to Cocoa Beach, Florida in August of 1998. I was delighted to locate it on the Internet this morning. We have also had a sighting of a Dan look-like-like in a nearby town – hat and all!

Barbara Trede
Cocoa Beach, Florida

BRINGING THE CUP BACK HERE
Dear Dan,

Thank you for a commentary on the recent America's Cup Races. Your article was on the mark and I would like to offer my thoughts.

I have followed yacht racing all my life, my father being a professional sailing skipper in these waters from WWI, through the late '50s. The family was from Nova Scotia and we came to Sag Harbor in 1932 when I was two years old, so I've seen a little myself.

If we are to reclaim the cup, we must concentrate our efforts into two strong syndicates and not dilute it over the same number we just sent to New Zealand. Our five syndicates spent about 150 million and won 105 races but no one boat could win enough to even get us into the challengers round! With one syndicate from the West Coast, combining San Diego, San Francisco and Hawaii and one from the East Coast out of New York City we would at least have a shot.

However, (back to your point), if we don't put in a number of boats it might become a non-event in the eyes of the media and there gos backers and sponsors.

There has to be a way for a country as strong as we are in every sense to get the cup back.

If the Brooklyn Dodgers had taken the Yankees out in back to back World Series with eight shutouts, (which is what NFL did in 1995 and 1960) I'm sure things would have changed in a hurry with that.

Ron Lowe
Sag Harbor

IT'S THE CATSKILLS
Dear Dan,

I always enjoy your articles for their style, humor, off beat subject matter, and, up to now, accuracy. The article on Hamptons Water, March 31, which clarified the problems concerning our water supply, failed on the last of the above-viz..."New York City receives its water largely by aqueduct from the Adirondacks." Where oh where are the Catskills whose reservoirs have supplied the Big Apple for lo these many decades? I'll still look forward to reading Dan's Papers.

Irving Levin
Via E-mail

IT'S ALL IN THE TRANSLATION
Dear Dan,

I could not help but chuckle when recently I heard a pseudo Indian-translation of Chappaqua meaning, "Home of separate bedrooms." It has long been know that Gracie is an acronym for, "Mansion with separate bedrooms."

We may well be in for a contest between the two most reseated senatorial candidates in New York State history. All that pent up energy... Scary thought.

Nicholas Zizelis
Amagansett/Bayside

ARTIST'S THANKS
Dear Dan,

I wanted to thank you for being interested in my work, following up on it and doing a cover story on one of my works. It is a good feeling to have this bit of recognition in my new hometown.

In fact, I am sending this copy of Dan's Papers to the local paper, The Echo, in my old hometown of Mullumbimby. I've been wanting to do this for ages but it seems I needed the added prompt of being on the cover to rouse me from the torpor. I'm sure they will be keenly interested to see an example of the local press here.

Could you please also pass on my thanks to Marion Wolberg Weiss for her story. It's a pity she didn't' agree with my preference for the photo of me as "Cyrano," but so it goes.

The hard hat-mining photo was similarly uncharacteristic.

OUTSTANDING
Dear Dan,

Just a quick note to say how much I enjoy your publication, Dan's papers. Lately, your articles re: Cuba (all series) and War Memorial are outstanding.

HOMEOWNERS WITH MONEY WORRIES MAY QUALIFY FOR LOW INTEREST LOANS
Loans: Direct lender loosens its requirements for homeowners who need money now.
Have you been turned down for a loan? Do you need more than $10,000 for any reason? Are you paying more than 10% interest on any other loans or credit cards?
If you are a homeowner and answered yes to any of these questions, they can tell you over the phone and without obligation if you qualitfy.
High credit card debt? Less than perfect credit? Self-employed? Late house payments? Financial problems? Medical bills? IRS liens? It doesn't matter!
If you are a homeowner with sufficent equity, there's an excellent chance you will qualify for a loan – usually within 24 hours.
